Pickleworks Wreck

When the LIRR Train Slammed Into the Pickle Factory in Calverton

By Dan Rattiner

Often when you read about the history of an area, you learn of some heroic rescue or some great train wreck. There's a certain dignity to it. "The Wreck of the Old John B." Folk songs are written. Legends made.

You don't often hear about the single worst train wreck in the history of Eastern Long Island, though. And there is a reason. Though it was spectacular and certainly worthy, there is something very, well, funny about the circumstances. You don't mean to, but it's hard to keep from laughing. You'd have to be a genius to find a way to write something serious out of this material.

The train wreck occurred late in the afternoon of August 14, 1926 at Calverton, just five miles west of Riverhead, and though it was a huge and spectacular crash, only one man died, a well-known State Assemblyman.

The train, called the Shelter Island Express, was barreling along at about 70 miles an hour, trying to make up time from some delays caused by rains and flooding earlier in the day. It was a Friday.

The reason it was called the Shelter Island Express was because that is what it was. From about 1880 and continuing on for the next hundred years — and this was the only one that crashed — the Long Island Rail Road ran two fast trains out of the station in Manhattan on Fridays in the summertime only, leaving at 4:19 p.m. and 4:29 p.m. respectively, to go non-stop for the summer resorts on eastern Long Island. They were special luxury trains consisting of parlour cars for the wealthy Wall Street bankers and industrial tycoons. These men, who worked all week in the city, would depart for their country estates on eastern was called the Cannonball and, after stopping in Southampton and East Hampton, it went all the way to Montauk. The second was the Shelter Island Express, which went to Greenport to end at the station there just a short 100-yard walk to the ferry boats, which on Friday were called "Daddy Boats." Children and wives were out at the dock on Shelter Island at 6:30 p.m. on Fridays to meet the fathers. It was actually a social occasion, standing there in the sun, waiting for the boats.

The Shelter Island Express that day consisted of two engines in the front and eight cars behind. According to a friend of mine named Ron Ziel, who is a railroad buff, the first of these two engines was Engine No. 214, one of the regular workhorses on the railroad. But the second engine, Number 2, was a larger camelback 4-4-2, a more powerful locomotive capable of taking a fully loaded train up to 110 miles an hour. It would never do this while in passenger service, of course, and it did not do so on this day. But tests had shown that, even under a heavy load, that was its top speed. Keep in mind that at that time, it took almost five hours to drive on the roads to eastern Long Island. Getting out here in two hours flat,

Long Island on Friday afternoons and would spend the weekend out there with their families and friends enjoying the salty sea air. On the trains, they sat in special individual club chairs in these magnificently appointed railroad cars reading the newspaper and drinking scotch served up to them by black porters in white coats. The fare was not cheap.

Talkers magazine recently announced that shock jock Howard Stern, who recently sold his Amagansett residence and is a frequent recipient of FCC indecency fines, is to receive its 2006 Freedom of Speech Award. "No one on air in America has inspired as much discussion of the First Amendment [as Stern]," said a spokesman for the magazine. This comes as much needed good news. Since Stern left the public airways last January for Sirius Satellite Radio, only one third of his fan base has followed.

which these special trains did to Greenport and Southampton, was a miracle of the age, and it required extra power — thus the camelback.

As I said, rains and floods held up the Shelter Island Express as it passed through Nassau County late that afternoon. But by the time the train had passed the Ronkonkoma station (without even slowing), the rain had stopped and the engineer was able to order up more steam. It was five thirty and, ahead of him in Calverton, the dozen or so workmen who labored five days a week at the Golden Pickle Factory along the side of the railroad tracks were just leaving for the weekend. The shift was at an end. The foreman locked up.

It was believed later, after an investigation, that what caused the great wreck that day was a small, two-inch long metal cotter pin. It was on a switch for a railroad siding just to the west of the pickle factory. When the pickles and brine were packed into barrels and loaded aboard the railroad freight car parked on the siding, filling it to capacity, someone would walk out to the siding, take the nut off one end of the cotter pin so it could slide out, then push the big lever very hard to move the rails so a train could come out the siding, then — after a freight engine had coupled with the car and moved it away — push the lever back in place and shove in the cotter pin to hold it. The nut, screwed back on, would lock it. When the events of that day were all over, they never did find that nut.

At exactly 6:08 p.m., the Shelter Island Express, with 358 souls on board the seven cars rocking along from side to side, approached this siding at about 70 miles an hour. It hit it square with a bang, causing the lead engine to leave the tracks, turn at ninety degrees and free up the big 4-4-2 camelback to take dead aim at the two story wooden pickleworks building.

At that moment, as it happened, the only person sitting in one of those comfortable club chairs in the first of the parlor cars right behind the camelback was State Assemblyman Hamilton Fish of Manhattan, then in his first two year term. He was thrown from his chair, his Wall Street Journal sent flying, and into the melee of pickle brine, bent iron and steel, 600 degree water and steam from the boiler and hot coals, wooden barrels and iron cauldrons, timbers, pot bellied stoves, cucumber and salt, silverware, dishes, glasses, scotch and ice cubes that was created by this crash.

The lead engine, breaking off and sliding on its side, wound up in the dirt parking area next to the pickleworks. The big 4-4-2 camelback is what hit. The pickleworks, a big wooden structure with a giant twenty foot wooden pickle on the outside of the building at second floor level facing west (so train passengers could see it), ate the engine, brought it to a halt, buckled and caved inward. There was no fire. But the crash split open the wooden barrels stored on a loft above, and as people from the farms nearby came running over to see what they could do, the salt in these barrels began spilling down on what lay on the floor below.

On the floor, in his three-piece suit with the bowtie, lay Rep. Hamilton Fish, moaning for help. The salt came down on top of him from above in great gushers, tons of it. And he died under it. Smothered to death.

This year of 2006 is the 80th anniversary year of the great Pickleworks Wreck of 1926. Cut short was the political career of one Hamilton Fish, a well-known New York assemblyman representing one of the districts in Manhattan. The Brooklyn Eagle, it is believed, headlined the story FISH KILLED AT PICKLEWORKS. But no one is exactly sure, because the files of the Brooklyn Eagle, the daily of that borough that went defunct shortly thereafter, were not saved.

May he rest in peace. Anybody want to write a folk song?

Houses In the Hamptons Get So Close They Link Together Here

By David Lion Rattiner

You are beginning to see it on just about every piece of property in the Hamptons. Houses are getting fatter. Bit by bit, more and more construction is being added to the homes out here, even the ones that were originally designed to be modest income homes. Quarter acre lots are getting filled all the way to the property line with a big fat house. Back yards, once prevalent on any home here, are becoming scarce.

So you may not find it surprising that two houses grew so big in East Hampton that the neighbors decided to join them together and jointly own them. Renne Skeebot and Todd Lurkson, both homeowners in East Hampton, are neighbors. Skeebot is a divorcee with two children in college while Lurkson is a financier who also is divorced, but does not have any children. He mostly uses his house on the weekends in the summer.

Both Skeebot and Lurkson have one-acre lots in Springs. Beginning two years ago, Ms. Skeebot decided that she wanted to add an addition on her home because, "I wanted to have a bigger space for my two sons to come home to." And so, she began building her addition to the south, which involved taking out another mortgage to cover the costs of building.

At the same time, Mr. Lurkson also decided to add on to his property. "I thought that I wanted to just add a pool house to my swimming pool but then I figured out that what I really wanted was another section of the house that extended around the pool." Mr. Lurkson applied for all of the proper permits from the town to get his building approved and construction was finished last year.

After both additions were done, the two neighbors were suddenly significantly closer to one another, having each built additions to their homes that were more than 1500 square feet. "We certainly were surprised at how close

BILLIONAIRE BOB SILLERMAN AND MUHAMMAD ALI

By Dan Rattiner

Many successful local people make their money in stocks and bonds, or by building food companies, or by trading on Wall Street. Robert F. X. Sillerman, a billionaire who lives in Southampton, is different. His adventures involve the entertainment business. He has a genius in marketing entertainment in synergistic ways.

Robert Sillerman made his original fortune in the more usual way, by building a business out of a chain of small radio stations around the country. But from there, he went off into rock star land. Selling his radio chain — by that time it was the largest privately owned radio chain in the country — for about $3 billion, he started a new venture involving producing rock and roll tours. He became the man you went to to put together advertising, venues, stadiums, ticket sales and music or other entertainment productions. Soon he had the largest music entertainment production company in the world. So he sold that.

In recent years, he tried his hand at running a college. But because his dream of what the college could be was not his to make — Long Island University had the right to decide that — it became his one failure. He resigned as Chancellor of LIU Southampton and after a year on the sidelines, last year started up again doing what he does best.

He formed a new company, one which would market the names and likenesses of a few famous American people and brands. He decided the three most famous names in America were Elvis Presley, Muhammad Ali and the TV show "American Idol." He bought "American Idol" and he bought the marketing rights to Elvis Presley. Now this past week he has bought the marketing rights to the third of the three famous names.

"We will market Muhammad Ali in a way that is respectful, methodical and impactful," he told the New York Times last week. Sillerman's firm CKX Entertainment has purchased 80% of Ali's name, image and likeness. After five years, Ali has the right to force CKX to buy the remaining twenty percent share of the company at fair market value.

our homes had gotten to one another. It didn't bother me, however. He is a nice guy," says Ms. Skeebot.

It appeared to have ended there, that was until last September when Mr. Lurkson applied for another permit for another addition to his home. This time, adding another wing to the east, within three feet of Ms. Skeebot's property line. "At first I was furious because I knew that his window was going to be the view outside my son's bedroom. He assured me that I would be happy with it once it was done, however, and that I could come over any time that I wanted to enjoy the new state of the art television room that he was adding to the house."

Both of Ms. Skeebot's sons were thrilled when the east wing was built by Mr. Lurkson, mainly because they could play X-Box on Mr. Lurkson's high definition projection screen.

"It was part of the agreement when I built my east wing that Ms. Skeebot and her boys could use it whenever they liked as long as it was within reason. We made a verbal agreement that we both honored."

At this point, more than half of Mr. Lurkson's property was being taken up by his house and swimming pool. The story continued to unfold, however. In November, Ms. Skeebot extended her home to the north, adding on 2000 square feet of space which included an artist's space, a game room, a new dining room and a small television room. "I didn't really like watching everything on such a big screen all of the time," says Skeebot.

Construction of Skeebot's north wing finished in January. Both Skeebot's home and Lurkson's home were now double their original sizes and their adjacent property lines were only separated by a couple of feet. It would surely have ended there, but then an unexpected factor kept the houses growing.

Since last February, Ms. Skeebot and Mr. Lurkson have been dating regularly and it has been getting serious. "Neither one of us wants to get married again, but we are absolutely in love," says Mr. Lurkson.

The romance was spurred on one night in November while the two were watching "Desperate Housewives" together on Mr. Lurkson's projection television set at his residence. I think you can guess where this is going.

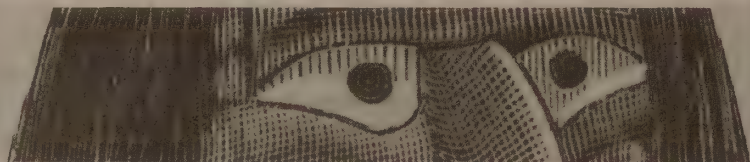

Last month, the couple applied for and got approved a plan to have their homes meshed together into one giant super house. Construction has already begun on the project, which will be finished at the end of May. "We basically were using each other's homes because our additions were so close to one another. We ran the idea by a real estate friend of ours who told us that the value of one super house is greater than that of two separate houses. So we just went ahead with the idea."

Their new home, which Mr. Lurkson and Ms. Skeebot will share, will be 14,000 square feet and also have a view of Three Mile Harbor. Ms. Skeebot's house has the view while Mr. Lurkson's house offers the pool.

The couple does not plan on stopping there. Eventually they plan on adding another floor to the home but they haven't figured out exactly what they will use it for. They hope to have the floor completed before the end of next fall.

CONGRESS'S SOLUTION FOR THE GAS SHORTAGE.....

A Calm

The Trouble With Wind Power as a Solution to Our Energy Problems

By Dan Rattiner

The question is — what will replace our addiction to foreign oil? And the answer is, according to many energy executives, wind power. They have done the math. With the improvements in technology now coming out of the pipeline, it is now possible to provide almost an unlimited amount of power at a reasonable cost. The engines of the future will be powered by these big blades going round and round in places, such as eastern Long Island, where there is lots of wind.

As I am sure you know, there is already a plan to put a huge wind farm of windmills out in the Atlantic Ocean six miles off Fire Island. They will be visible to bathers on the shore. But certainly it is not too much to ask if the result is unlimited power without the high cost and the politics associated with oil and without the damage to the environment that is threatening to end life on Earth as we know it. It's a win, win for everybody. Or is it?

I've been thinking a whole lot about this. With oil, we pump pollutants up into the atmosphere and, because the atmosphere has nowhere to dump the pollutants, it eventually gets to the point where the atmosphere gives up and starts heating up.

It's not quite out of hand yet, but it will be if we don't do anything soon. This atmosphere is all we've got. Beyond it is the vacuum of space.

As for wind, it is caused because the Earth is spinning. The Earth spins around, and, as it does, it tries to take the atmosphere with it, but it can't. And so the atmosphere slides, and if a storm cloud exists over Minnesota on Monday, it is still up there in the atmosphere on Tuesday a little to the east of the same place, but down below is New York. In other rows and rows of windmills. And in certain places on the land, more rows and rows of windmills. And what will soon happen, I predict, is that eventually we will use up all the wind.

Think about a sailboat race. Two sailboats are going along, and one tries to pass the other. It comes up behind smartly, but then as it pulls alongside, particularly if it pulls alongside on the downwind side, it falls back. The wind has been blocked by the sails of the other boat. It's a tricky business getting a sailboat to pass another sailboat on the downwind side.

Now think about thousands of individual windmills all in rows. Flip the switch. And if there are enough of them, and they have reached a critical mass, there will be more windmills looking for wind than there will be wind.

This is no laughing matter. It was one thing, when a century ago western civilization was just getting started and there were a few things that needed to be powered to go somewhere. But now western civilization is almost everywhere, and the need for power — for things that get turned around and around — is astonishing. And insatiable. There is no frugality or sense to Western Civilization. It

And in certain places on the land, more rows and rows of windmills. What will soon happen is that eventually we will use up all the wind.

words, the atmosphere slips around the Earth slightly slower than how the Earth turns. And the result is wind.

The good news is that we have hardly made any use of it. It is there in abundance. The bad news is that we have become so dependent on the mobile society, that when we decide that wind is the way to go, we will have to use an awful lot of it. There will be, out in the ocean, just goes onward and upward, hungrier and hungrier. And the haves want more of it — and applaud when they get it — and the have nots want a bigger piece of the action, too.

So if they start building windmills, and then more windmills and more windmills, what will happen as far as power is concerned is that they will reach the limit. And at that time — think carefully about this — with the windmill blades dragging at the atmosphere more and more, eventually, from the perspective of the earth, there will no longer be any wind, and the atmosphere of the earth will be racing along at the exact same speed as the Earth. In other words, a storm over Minnesota will simply stay over Minnesota. If you want to see a storm, you could get in your wind-powered car and drive to Minnesota to see it.

Wherever you are, every day will be the same as every other. There will be floods in some places. There will be heat waves in others. It will be a disaster. And soon, people will be marching and carrying signs reading END WIND POWER, or FREE THE WIND, as they head off to the Mall in Washington for a weekend of demonstrations and speechifying. Eventually, like it or not, wind power will have to go the way of fossil fuel power and nuclear power.

You think I'm kidding about this? Why do you think that Hydroelectric power is no longer seen as our salvation? Why are there fewer and fewer dams in the world, and fewer and fewer paddle wheels and waterfalls? One hundred years ago — before any of us were born — hydroelectric power reached its limit. The salmon stopped leaping up the Columbia River in Oregon. Niagara Falls stopped. Even the waves in the ocean stopped. All the surf shops went out of business.

And the engineers and scientists had to back off. And they've been cutting back with the dams ever since. They learned.

And now we have to learn all over again, but this time about the wind. It's the wave of the future, as we used to say. But the wave can only be so high, if you will pardon this metaphor, before it overwhelms all of us in a cacophony of eerie stillness.

Either that, or the earth will stop spinning ENTIRELY because of the drag of all the windmills. I don't even want to think about the ramifications of that possibility.

Jingle Contest

Who Won the Contest to Create a Catchy Slogan for the Hamptons?

By Dan Rattiner

Readers responded by the hundreds during this past month to my call for a contest to create a slogan for the Hamptons. We need a slogan. We have I Love NY. Why not a slogan for the Hamptons? The results were, frankly, the most pathetic bunch of entries I have ever read. What the hell is the matter with you people? Not YOU, of course, we had a wonderful entry from YOU, but I'm talking about the others. A bunch of marketing geniuses they ain't.

Some of them, nay, most of them, tried to dazzle us with great numbers of entries. There were some people who sent us as many as twenty-five entries, each one more lame than the other. We had, by count, 210 people entering this contest. I had to wade through probably a thousand separate entries. It was if some of these people must have thought, well, I really haven't got much upstairs so I'll just dazzle him with all these lame slogans. There's got to be a gem in there somewhere and we know Dan, he'll find it. And then I win. What was it again? Lunch for two at Bobby Van's?

I could tell you some of these atrocious entries, but I don't want to embarrass anybody. With all my luck, two of the three lame ones that I would point out — three is about as many as I feel would be fair to inflict upon you — would turn out to be yours. And then you would sue me.

The contest idea came about because of the attempt by the State of New Jersey to come up with a slogan. It was ordered up by the governor. He, at first, hired a professional marketing firm to come up with the slogan and he paid them $220,000. They came up with "New Jersey. We'll Win You Over." What a waste. He fired them.

After that he ran a statewide contest asking all the citizenry of New Jersey to rise up with imaginative entries. And in the course of this, people came up with some truly wonderful entries, such as "New Jersey — You Gotta

WHY I CAME ONLINE LATE LAST MONDAY, GUYS

By Dan Rattiner

Note to reader: As you may have read last week, I am at a safari camp in Africa and editing the paper over the Internet by portable satellite dish. Tuesday is our deadline day. But this past week, I came online late. I wrote the staff this explanation of why I was delayed. They thought the readers might enjoy it, so here it is.

* * *

So here is why I was four hours late getting online. I owe you guys this.

Normal sequence here is game drive from 4:30 to 8 p.m. our time (six hours ahead of you) followed by dinner. Before dinner, I would go to the computer here in the lodge library and check for messages and answer them, then eat, then return and finish up. It's Tuesday after all. First look with you therefore would be 2 p.m. your time, an hour and a half later for follow up until done.

This lodge is called Singita Ebony and it is adjacent to the Kruger National Park — a game park — in South Africa. It is an unbelievably posh resort — about twice the size of Gurney's with perhaps 100 employees and, believe it or not, just seven rooms, so the fourteen guests are treated like royalty. As in, when we first got here we were introduced to our butler. This is the exact opposite of the tent camp experiences we've had before this. Singita, by the way, was voted by readers at Conde Nast Traveler as the best resort in the entire world regardless of price in 2004.

Anyway, we go out on the drive at 4:30 p.m. Our tracker, who sits in a chair bolted to the grille of the Land Cruiser, is from the nearby native village, the guide who is driving is named Tal Feinberg, a white Jewish guide born and raised in Swaziland here in South Africa who looks like an even handsomer

Problem Wid Dat?" And "New Jersey — Most of our Elected Officials Have Not Been Indicted." Eventually, he settled on "New Jersey. Come See for Yourself." Maybe I'm wrong, but that's not "I Love NY." But then what they had to deal with was New Jersey. Probably would have been better if the governor hadn't decided to go ahead with it in the first place, if you ask me.

Which brings me to the matter at hand. The Hamptons have such a sterling reputation and have so much going for them. When I proposed this contest as a sort of counterpoint to the New Jersey debacle, I was in our editorial meeting we have every Thursday afternoon and I asked a few of my writers for suggestions right then and there. One of them came up with a terrific slogan. It is "The Hamptons. Are You On the List?" But since he is an employee of this newspaper, a full-time employee, I quickly clapped my hands over my ears — too late — because I knew that this would be disqualified. My son, the genius, full-time employee of this newspaper, is doubly ineligible. You can't have nepotism or cronyism when you run a contest.

All right, let's get down to it. There were some gems in there among the thousands, after all. Needles in a haystack do grow on trees.

Actually, I wrote all of the above BEFORE I began wading through all the entries. I had

this huge stack of them and the first page, which had about forty did have a daunting number that were just awful. And what I wrote above was just a big rant about what I expected would be a simply awful upcoming chore, which would be to wade through the rest of them. So now I've read them. And you know, some of them are really good. And a few are actually great.

Here are the semi-finalists. Some of them, surely, are in fun. Others, I think, have considerable merit.

"The Hamptons — we make more money than you." — Deborah Brown-Volkman.

"The Hamptons — entering whine country." — David Porrello.

"The Hamptons — beauty and the beach." — Rita Magier.

"The Hamptons — the beginning before the end." — Michele Rodney.

"The Hamptons — One Potato, Two Potato." — Raleigh Green.

"The Hamptons — Don't Leave Home Without Your Wallet." — Frances Mueller

"The Hamptons — It's New York, but out There." — John D. Miller.

"The Hamptons — Live Your Dream." — Susan Pikitch.

SECOND PRIZE goes to.....

"The Hamptons — Tractors, Trains and Yachts." — Karen Parker O'Brien.

And our WINNER is.....

"The Hamptons — Where the Sea Greets the Stars." — Eileen Bellini of Southampton, New York.

I want to thank everyone who participated in this contest. It's over. Stop sending them now. We will contact the winner and arrange for the prize.

Beach Burglars Caught

Cops Set Up a Sting and It Brings Down 4 Beach Parking Lot Thieves

By David Lion Rattiner

It was a frustrating time for all of us. Week after week we would read about the same crimes. Somebody was breaking into parked cars at the beach and stealing purses. It happened at least once a week. Sometimes twice, and it was depressing to think that a day at the beach meant you were risking some of your most valuable belongings. Nearly every beach lot, between Southampton and East Hampton, had been hit by this crime spree. In total, more than two dozen vehicles were hit. These criminals were getting away with it and the newspaper reporting on the matter was rubbing it in all our faces.

The crime appeared to be perfect. The thieves kept getting away clean, week after week, and police had no clues or leads. But that didn't mean that they didn't have a plan. They did. And last week it worked. It was a sting operation. Finding out that the police caught the four people that committed these crimes was so satisfying; you almost were glad that they were stealing from parked cars at the beach in the first place.

After a long sting operation, and a six-month investigation, police finally got the bad guys last Sunday. What they did was pretty remarkable.

Way back in early March, several bosses from Southampton Town, Southampton Village, East Hampton Town and East Hampton Village got together at a table to discuss how to catch the beach burglars. "When we had the meeting we decided that setting up decoys, among other things, might work. We knew we had to get aggressive with this case," said Detective Sergeant Randy Hintze from the Southampton Town Police Department. The robberies had been going on for more than three months.

Using incredible organization, the East Hampton and Southampton Police Departments systematically started setting up decoy cars around the different beaches. They

HIGH SCHOOL PSYCHOLOGIST RESIGNS, FINALLY

By David Stoll

Here is the most peculiar news of the week. Diane DeMartini-Scully, formerly a psychologist in the East Hampton Middle School, has resigned her position. The news is peculiar because any rational person would have assumed that she long ago lost that job. After all, DeMartini-Scully has been arrested in North Carolina and Mattituck for having sex with an underage boy. But tenure being the most powerful of institutions (she received tenure in January 2004) DeMartini could not be fired solely on the basis of the arrest and accusations. She was removed from her position as psychologist, however.

This rather sad story first came to light in October. At the end of the 2004-2005 school year, a certain 16-year-old boy and his family had moved from DeMartini-Scully's home town of Mattituck to North Carolina. Thereafter, during Columbus Day weekend, DeMartini-Scully traveled to North Carolina, where she is alleged to have taken the boy and his 12-year-old sister to a hotel room without permission and gave them marijuana. She was arrested by North Carolina police and charged with child abduction, giving controlled substances to minors, and child abuse.

In connection with those events, the boy's mother informed the police that DeMartini-Scully had been having a sexual affair with the boy. Because the age of consent in North Carolina is 16, this information did not provide the basis for a charge of statutory rape. The age of consent in New York, however, is 17. So, in February of this year, Southold police arrested DeMartini-Scully in Mattituck. At her arraignment, DeMartini-Scully was charged with two felony counts, namely third-degree rape and third-degree criminal sexual act. She was released after posting bail of $10,000. The started doing this in later March and began to fish for a break in. Using surveillance and communication with all of the different departments, they finally arrested a group of four last Sunday. The four that were arrested were Yeison "Jason" Monroy, 22, his sister Jennifer Monroy, 17, Samantha Kinney, 20 and Raphael Goncalves, 20. All of the suspects are from Southampton.

Police ended up getting a break on the case when several empty purses were found at local beaches near a restaurant in Amagansett. A witness saw them dump the purses and was able to give police a description of the vehicle they were driving, a Toyota 4-Runner. Officers were therefore able to identify the vehicle fitting the description and began tracking it because the drivers of the vehicle also fit the description of the people that dropped off the stolen purses. Police needed to catch the four suspects in the act.

"All of the Southampton and East Hampton Village and Town Police began to work together, setting up decoys at different beaches. We were combining our resources and our personnel to make it work," said Det. Sgt. Hintze.

This was definitely not a situation where different jurisdictions were butting heads with one another like they often do in the movies. Instead, all of the different departments were working together to get an important job done.

Two officers that were hiding near the decoy vehicle located at the beach watched in silence last Sunday. A Toyota 4-Runner pulled up alongside the decoy car, as the officers waited in anticipation.

Suspect Jason Monroy then jumped out of the car and smashed the window of the decoy car and took a purse from it. Like lightning, officers responded to the break-in and began arresting everyone in the car. Only three of the four suspects were there during this "robbery." Mr. Goncalves was later arrested after going to the police station to inquire about why his friends had been arrested. Not so bright an idea, but a welcome development for police. After questioning, Mr. Goncalves confessed to committing similar crimes.

Police believe that most if not all of the robberies that have occurred in the past six months were caused by the four suspects. Many of the cell phones, video cameras, digital cameras and other items have been recovered by police.

"Maybe people will think twice before breaking into a car," said Det. Sgt. Hintze, who also said that the decoy strategy has been used before in other cases like this.

Police still need to determine exactly how many break-ins the group is responsible for, but the hard part of catching the bad guys is over and we can breathe a little easier when parking at the beach. And certainly, congratulations are in order for the smarts and hard work that the police put in to catch the beach burglars. Having all of the different districts working together is not an easy task, but the hard work appears to have paid off. This is what happens when everyone works together.

Bang Restoration

Plans Afoot to Continue the Boys and Girls Harbor Bastille Day Fireworks

By Christian McLean

Plovers, real estate transactions and insufficient funds have taken the bang out of Independence Day on the East End. The 4th of July was once the weekend that made the summer — rockets' red glare, bombs bursting in air, but now the skies are darker, quieter. Last year, the Piping Plovers overran Main Beach in East Hampton, resulting in the cancellation of the fireworks celebration on the Fourth of July weekend. This year's show will likely suffer still more problems. Several months ago, also in East Hampton, the 27-acre summer camp, Boys and Girls Harbor, was put up for sale to the Town. The annual fireworks show it hosts near Bastille Day, July 14, over Three Mile Harbor, was put out to pasture. Shelter Island's Crescent Beach fireworks show, plagued by new regulations and the requirement of a barge, is battling with raising enough funds and may fizzle out, as well. And all over the East End it will be less noisy on America's birthday.

But there may be a light at the end of the tunnel, or at least over Three Mile Harbor. Rossetti Perchik, a Springs native, is trying to keep the Three Mile Harbor fireworks spectacular alive. When he became aware of the sale of Boys and Girls Harbor, and the realization that the fireworks show, which is enjoyed by thousands, would be coming to an end, Perchik decided something had to be done to preserve the twenty-some-odd-year tradition. Traditionally the display is part of an annual fundraiser for B&G Harbor, and part of the money raised helps to keep the fireworks going. Fireworks by Grucci of Bellport has provided the show free of charge, keeping the price of the event to a minimum.

So without the backing of the B&G Harbor event and the donation from Grucci, how does Mr. Perchik plan to pay for the display? Well, Perchik is no novice when it comes to fundraising. His not for profit organization, Clamshell

LESS EH AIRPORT RUNWAY? MORE PROBLEMS

By Grant MacMurray

Controversy continues to swarm around the dilapidated runway 4-22 at the East Hampton airport. While condemned under the current airport master plan, 4-22 continues to draw fire for its potential use, lack of use, and its dangerously deteriorated state (there are large chunks of grass peeking out from large cracks in the asphalt). The most intriguing recent development in the ongoing debate over the runway, indicative of larger lifestyle, community, and, of course, political concerns, surfaced last Tuesday with a letter sent to Town Supervisor Bill McGintee by the attorney and representative for Save East Hampton Airport, Kevin M. Fox. Fox contended that, in the case of accident, the town could be liable. "The town's actions could be deemed by a jury to be the proximate cause of the death or injury of a pilot and his [or] her passengers if a crash occurs while attempting to land a small plane in a cross-wind condition on one of the two remaining runways." 4-22 is a secondary runway, useful for landing small planes when wind conditions call for it (its angle of approach providing relative safety from powerful cross-winds). If a pilot should be forced to use the main or ancillary runways, which are angled differently from one another (and less favorable for landing small aircraft), and in so doing come to harm, then, according to Mr. Fox, the town might be held accountable for refusing to fix or reopen 4-22. Mr. Fox, no stranger to the ongoing battle over the proper use and proportion of the airport, sent a similar letter three years ago putting the town "on notice" that 4-22 was in need of repair.

Mr. McGintee closed the runway on March 31st of this year, having been put on such notice, and complied with the laws invoked by Mr. Fox, which state that the town is responsi-

Foundation, has been holding fundraisers, including an annual sand castle building contest, for several years. The organization gathers support for local shellfish hatcheries, the Nature Conservancy, and food pantries. But bolstering the funds of a food pantry and raising $100,000 for the fireworks are a little different, especially since he only has two and a half months to do it. Then again, maybe it's not that difficult. Maybe it's simply about spreading the responsibility throughout the community.

When it comes down to it, it is only a couple of dollars per viewer of the show. If everyone contributed five dollars, the feat would not be insurmountable. After all, the fireworks show over Three Mile Harbor is probably the last egalitarian event in East Hampton. All you need is a folding chair and childlike wonderment. It's exactly what the 4th of July is all about — equality. Everyone gets a view. Everyone gets to enjoy the show. So maybe everyone who attends should show a little good faith and support the event.

Other ideas to raise funds for the show are through the sale of T-shirts and hats, raffles, and possibly even corporate sponsors. Mr. Perchik says that this isn't just about the fireworks. It is also a fantastic opportunity to raise money for charity. All the permits are in place, Perchik has been given the nod by East Hampton Town Marine Patrol, Fire Marshal and the Town Board. It seems the only thing that's preventing the fireworks from continuing is YOU, East Hampton. Dig into your pockets, forgo that morning cup of coffee for a few days and donate just a few tax-deductible dollars to preserve a quarter century's worth of tradition. Hey, you may even help out a charity or two while you're doing it. For those interested, donations are being accepted by Clamshell Foundation, P.O. Box 2725, East Hampton, 11937.

Signs of freedom are disappearing at an alarming rate. This is your chance as Americans to support your town, support charity, and support tradition on one of our nation's most important days. If we don't act now to preserve the fireworks in our communities, pretty soon we'll be huddled along the shores Oooing and Ahhhing at distress flares. But for this writer, the distress signals are already being sent, and it's people like Ross Perchik who are answering them.

boy's name is being withheld, consistently with rape cases.

It was following her North Carolina arrest when the East Hampton Middle School ended DeMartini-Scully's duties as psychologist, but she was given some sort of "special assignment" in an office away from children and allowed to come to work. Following her New York arrest, she stopped going to the school altogether, but she did not resign until last week.

Many people have snickered about this story, because there is something so odd about a woman sexual predator going after an underage boy, rather than the other way around. Indeed, the boy in question does not want DeMartini-Scully to face charges, as he feels that she "didn't do anything to hurt anybody" and he was a willing participant. Whatever our reactions tell us about our views concerning the sexes, the story is actually even more sordid, for DeMartini-Scully is married with two children.

Worse, according to the boy's mother, the boy had initially been dating DeMartini-Scully's daughter, who was 13 at the time. DeMartini-Scully is alleged to have encouraged the boy to have sex with her daughter. Then at some point, she is said to have asked the boy if he wanted to watch TV with her in her bed, which led to the first of several full sexual encounters.

The East Hampton Middle School has since hired a new psychologist.

Why

Jerry Seinfeld. Long black eyelashes. About thirty. You know the type. (Other guides we've had include a Boer and three blacks. Guides by the way know absolutely everything, and carry rifles.) There are three rows of seats behind the driver of this open car — each row has three seats — and Chris and I are in the first row, an Irishman and his wife are in the second row and a money manager black guy from Los Angeles, who gets up at 4 a.m. to check the market every day normally, is in the third row with his wife. This is the third day this exact crew has been together, going out on a morning drive (5 a.m. to 8 a.m.) and the evening drive (4:30 p.m. to 8 p.m.). We have bonded. We go out.

We see some elephants in the brush. We press on. We see birds. We see impala, wildebeests, buffalo. We drive around. We go up to the airstrip, which has a little open air terminal with a thatch roof, and see a cheetah in the tall grass and watch him lie there for a while. Cheetahs, in full stride, go about 80 miles an hour. One bound at full throttle is 24 feet on average. Huge. This one lies there licking himself. Hears something. Gets up. Looks across runway. Decides it's nothing and lies down again. We leave.

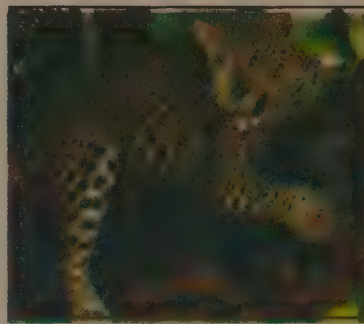

Around 6:45, we come upon a male leopard — the dominant male in this area — a huge 350-pound beast, walking down the road marking the foliage every 50 yards. We follow at a safe distance. The tracker in the front, who is at this point an hors d'oeuvre, hops off the chair and climbs into the car. Then we close in. At a bend in the road, Tal takes the Land Cruiser on a shortcut and we are now at a 45 degree angle just alongside the road and ahead of the leopard. The leopard suddenly cuts into the grass, then sneaks up, or just walks up to the passenger side of the car WHERE I AM SITTING and comes to within two feet of the car and stares up at me. Tal whispers don't move. I don't move. (Tal's loaded rifle by the way is on a rack on the dashboard but he is not going for it.) The leopard looks at the Irishman, then looks away, then walks around the Land Cruiser and continues on his way.

We take lots of pictures. I am having an adrenaline attack. The LA money manager says he has soiled himself, but he is joking. We all laugh. Ha Ha. We press on. At this point it is 7:15.

It is 7:30. We stop to look at a ferret in the grass or something. It is dark, we are using a bright spotlight and the eyes glow, he runs off.

Tal says he has a surprise ahead. Money manager says, how do you top this? A lion? And we swing up to the airport runway where the open air terminal is set up with about 30 lanterns, a bar, six in help including three butlers and a chef in a hat, a table for the seven of us, and a choice of very expensive wines. Dinner at the airport. We are given menus. At the top of the menu it reads AIRSTRIP DINNER MENU. I am bringing it home. Many choices. In the goddamn open air terminal. There is no electricity in this terminal. And they have trucked in this dinner. For example, Tempura of prawns set on smoked red pepper risotto for an appetizer and marinated butterfish with black sticky rice, roasted roma tomato and basil chili sauce. And there are three other choices for appetizer and three for main course.

I'm talking a three hour dinner. Great dinner conversation. Mandela, Bush, tigers, Ireland, stocks and bonds, malaria etc. What could I do. And where is the goddamn cheetah? Midway through the dinner, guards are posted. They have spotted a jackal. Jackals are just under lions and ahead of leopards as far as killers go. They are #2. Wild dogs, believe it or not, are #3. Cheetahs are #4. Dessert is mocha crème brulee or one of two other choices. And so we get back to the lodge at 10:15 and I rush to the computer in the library and so go online. It's 10:30 p.m. my time, 4:30 p.m. your time.

—Dan Rattiner 12:15 a.m. Wednesday here, 6:15 p.m. Tuesday there.

And a porter is waiting to take me down to our three-room cottage suite with a flashlight because after dark you aren't supposed to be outside alone.

Who's Here

By Joan Zandell

On an idyllic day, the first truly smashing day of the Spring, with the sun shining and birds chirping noisily on tree branches just beginning to bud, Nigel Noble and I meet to discuss his most recent film, The Beauty Academy of Kabul, which opened this past Friday at the Sag Harbor Cinema.

Nigel Noble is an energetic, silver-haired Englishman with inquiring eyes and a disarming smile. Despite his kind and humble demeanor, he is no newcomer to success. The recipient of an Academy Award as well as several Emmy Awards, this East End resident can't resist a good story.

"A good story," says Mr. Noble, "is an experience in which the audience can wallow and then come out the other end in a different place. The film should be a process in which people, with whom we might not ordinarily have the opportunity to rub shoulders, are revealed. And those people should be given a voice."

He goes on. "In Charcoal People, [a film that looks at the appalling conditions of child labor in the Amazon Rain forest] I focused on the people who are living on the frontlines of the destruction of the planet. They understand the problems of the world in a very wise way."

Mr. Noble pauses thoughtfully. "In Serafina [the film was produced in association with Lincoln Center and resides in the permanent collection at the Museum of Broadcasting in NYC] you heard the voices of apartheid."

He scratches his head, smiles and adds, "In truth.....a good documentary is a home movie. It's like somebody comes into your house and records you getting up in the morning, brushing your teeth, going downstairs for coffee. By watching, we learn about ourselves. Putting it in that context cuts away the bull."

Nigel Noble grew up in Bristol, England. His father was a surgeon and his mother did what was expected in those days. She was a socialite who preferred to leave her children with the nanny. The youngest of three, Mr. Noble and his siblings all found their callings in the dramatic arts.

"I started at the Royal Shakespeare Theatre as a carpenter and three years later became the Stage Manager. At that time, we produced Marat Sade with Glenda Jackson and King Lear starring Paul Scofield and Irene Worth. Diana Rigg and Julie Christie were members of the company and Peter Brook was the director."

Theatrical trailblazer Peter Brook, known as the most avant-garde and creative theatre director of the 20th century, was a formidable presence on either side of the Atlantic. "He liked to keep everyone on edge," says Mr. Noble, "so he would shift things around at the last minute to keep people alive and paying attention. His technique guaranteed that the performances would be fresh. I think those early days in the theatre are what gave me my love for making documentaries. When I work, it's opening night all the time."

Nigel Noble Documentarian

Some documentary filmmakers like to map out their story and subject matter beforehand. Mr. Noble has his own creative style. "I like to approach the subject with a little knowledge and learn the rest 'on the fly'. Some people find that nerve wracking. The first take should be

Of course, what we've learned is that mysterious as we had been led to believe.

the only take.

"In the aftermath of 9/11, The Beauty Academy of Kabul was made because everyone hated the people of Afghanistan. Someone needed to show audiences around the world the way they really were. And of course, what we've learned is that Afghani women are very similar to American women. Their plight is not as mysterious as we had been led to believe."

The opening of Kabul all over the country has kept Nigel Noble busy. Being an artist, he is eager to get back to work. He is presently at work on his next three projects. One is a PBS series about the American Craft movement. "There has never been a series on American craft," said Mr. Noble, "I was attracted to the material because my wife is a fibre artist, I have a son who is a blacksmith and another son who was going to be a glass-blower. Now you would never think in this day and age that there would be a profession like a blacksmith, but it is a real art form." Mr. Noble's son will not appear in his installment of the series, but will appear in subsequent episodes.

"I'm also in the beginning stages of two films. One is a documentary and one is a feature film. Both of them share a theme: how we don't learn from history." He chuckles and then says, "This is the way things work in my life, projects appear in thematic groups. Both stories take place in the years leading up to WWII and throughout Hitler's reign in Germany. We haven't learned our lessons about how evil that period was. Now, we find ourselves in a different era, in which we have an administration where there are parallels to that time. The documentary takes a close look at the role of American Corporations who were in partnership with Nazi Germany, during and after WWII. I am collaborating on that venture with a local writer, and the project is being represented by Cinetic Media in New York."

"The feature film, a dramatic film for theatrical release, is a love story between two famous American writers who risked their lives and careers in order to warn the world about Hitler. Their relationship could not withstand the pressure and it eventually fell apart with tragic consequences. It is a great story and is presently under consideration with George Clooney's production company."

Clearly not one to let grass grow beneath his feet, he is off to his next appointment as well as his next adventure. I ask Mr. Noble for a final thought about what he has devoted his life to doing. He pauses for a moment. A breeze tousles his hair. In response he runs his hand through short silver strands reflecting the sunlight and he says, "Film can't change the world — but it can open people's hearts and minds. A film can make people think."

ble for the repair or removal of a potential hazard once it has been brought to the town's attention. By closing the runway, Mr. McGintee felt he was complying with the law. The Supervisor noted that under the former master plan, 4-22 was slated to be abandoned; however, the town board approved an outline last Tuesday for a new master plan, examining the potential future use of all current airport runways. In all the rigmarole of what has been nearly a ten-year battle, the politics of the issue have come to cloud some fairly basic points regarding the personal welfare of travelers and pilots. The pilots association has requested that the town make full repairs to 4-22 immediately, in the name of safety.

Elliot Meisel, pilot and Sagaponack resident, said, "We're trying to constructively work with the town board to maintain an existing facility that will benefit the town." Mr. Meisel went on to say that he was "dismayed that [the issue has become] so politicized." He felt that it was the duty of the town to maintain the airport as it would any other facility which falls under its purview, and went on saying that not only does the airport add to the town's economy, but, "It's disingenuous to ignore [the greater public good] for the narrow interest of people who are opposing the airport, perhaps because of noise over their own houses." He called the town's inaction both "ill-informed and ill-advised," stemming from motives, perhaps, "other than are being articulated," adding, "Closing 4-22 at this time is not going to reduce liability. It may actually increase liability, because it is going to force those small planes to use 10-28 [one of the ancillary runways] in those crosswinds..."

Among airport expansion opponents, the catch-22 surrounding 4-22 holds a certain amount of power as a political weapon. If the town were to repair 4-22 it would, to a certain mind-set, constitute expansion, not merely maintenance or renovation. Several of these opponents are former town Democratic committee members and politicians, who, while denying the charge that their ultimate goal is the closing of the airport, have nevertheless posed staunch opposition to most attempts on the part of airport proponents to mend this issue once and for all. Under the

At East Hampton Airport

Schneiderman administration, Republicans supported an "in place, in kind," approach to maintaining the runway, which has been squashed by Town Democrats, many of whom live in the area surrounding the airport. Former Town Democratic Party Leader David Gruber has purportedly spent large amounts of his own money funding studies indicting the effects of the airport and litigating against airport proponents. In other words, the ongoing clash of cultures and/or ideologies has found, in a dilapidated runway with sprouting grass disjuncting its surface, yet another battle ground on which to contend.

Ironically, a somewhat macabre ad depicting the possible consequences of a hurricane on the East End, made by airport proponents with the express purpose of swaying the town to repair problems such as 4-22, led in some ways to the runway closing. "The ad paints a very grim picture," said Leonard Scioacia, president of Cook, Hall and Hyde Inc. Insurance and Risk Advisory Services in a letter sent to Supervisor McGintee last week. "Any accident at the airport is likely to result in significant bodily injury or property damage." Mr. Scioacia recommended the immediate closing of the runway, "pending assessment by a qualified organization specializing in runway safety evaluations." This assessment no doubt figured largely in the decision to close 4-22 at least for the immediate future.

Mr. Meisel, in response to the closure, noted that while lighter planes can and do land on grass, "when you land on a paved surface, you expect it to be smooth. That runway today is serviceable. It should be paved. But it was an inappropriate action to shut it down."

While the closing of the runway is official and is to be marked to designate it's 'out of service' status, there is nothing obstructing its potential use in the case of an emergency. Councilwoman Pat Mansir, who supported the closing in light of the current situation, said, "I don't want to get rid of a runway that we've got that the airmen can use when the winds are a certain way."

Wishing to remain in control of the managing of the airport, Mr. McGintee has refused Federal Aviation Administration grant money, which would allow for the necessary repairs with the addendum, however, that the airport abide by specific F.A.A. decisions and regulations for a period of twenty years. "I'm a little skeptical about using tax dollars to patch up a runway that been officially abandoned since 1989," said McGintee.

Of particular speculative concern in the ongoing battle is just what the potential closing of the airport might mean for car traffic on the already congested East End. With the summer coming and the allure of forty minute helicopter rides from Manhattan, one can envision a future where the inconvenience of traffic snarls has been traded in for the danger, disruption and unnerving whirr of chopper blades. It seems to fast be becoming the mark of the age that those who attempt to cling to standards based on former modes of life are seen as antique and whiney while those who wish to decimate all that has been for a reckless unregulated future seem ogre-ish and frightening. At least in the snail's pace world of our bureaucracy, things are slowly and never definitively settled.

TWENTYSOMETHING... By DAVID LION RATTINER

Dolphin Rescue

It was just your average day in a resort town. Last Saturday, I was checking out the surf at Main Beach in East Hampton with my friend Tom. Saturday was gorgeous so there was absolutely no reason to stay inside of the car like I normally have been doing this winter when I head down to the ocean. A walk was in order.

The two of us had started walking east for a little bit when off in the distance, I saw something unusual. "Do you see that all the way over there?"

"What?"

"I think there is a fish or something on the beach."

"Where?"

"Down there."

"By the jetty?"

"Yeah, it's like right there. There is definitely something there. Look, I think that is a cop."

We started to hustle a little bit more down the beach. Sure enough, it became clearer and clearer what was going on. A dolphin, or at least what I thought was a dolphin, had beached itself. "Holy crap, dude! There is a giant dolphin on the beach!"

"There are no dolphins around here. It's got to be a baby whale."

"I'll bet you it's a dolphin."

We made a gentleman's wager. I bet on it being a dolphin. It sure looked a lot like a dolphin to me. I'm no expert, but I've seen them on the Discovery Channel plenty of times. I walked over to the Police Officer Matt Kochanasz, with whom I went to high school, and Officer Matt Morgan, to ask them what was going on. "We called up the Marine Foundation in Riverhead. They are going to come down and take it off the beach."

Loading the dolphin into the truck

A small crowd started to form at the beach. This large creature that was on the beach fascinated all children and adults alike. One man walked over to it and tried to pet it but was immediately called off by another police officer. If a wave rolled the dolphin (or baby whale) too much, it could roll into him and break his leg. The general estimation by the crowd and the police officers that were there was that it weighed more than 600 lbs.

The beach suddenly turned into a scene from a movie. Families, grandparents, lifeguards, people with dogs, people with cameras all started heading down to where the dolphin was. About twenty minutes later, a group of five from the Riverhead Marine Foundation came down to the beach in a four-wheel drive pickup truck. Everyone was excited to see them.

To me, they looked like a super hero group because they were all wearing the same red and black colored outfit. Kind of like the Fantastic Four, only there were five of them.

A woman named Kim Durham, who is the rescue program director for the Riverhead Marine Foundation, walked down to the beach and gave a very quick examination of what she was looking at, then walked back up the beach and spoke to the crowd. "What we have here is a Risso's Dolphin. It is highly unusual for these dolphins to be on shore. Normally they are more than one hundred miles offshore, so something must be very wrong with her. Her weight is very low and she also has a gash in her belly. My guess is she is sick and we'll probably have to put her down. She is not in good shape."

"I told you it was a dolphin!"

The entire crowd gave me a look like I was a heartless human being. A couple of people

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #395 Signs of Spring

Well that's it...the clocks have been turned forward, Easter and Passover are over, we're all eating pastel colored egg salad sandwiches and leftover matzoh which means spring is officially here!

Some other signs of Spring on the Island....

The bar at the Dory is open.

The outdoor displays in downtown Shelter Island are showing up on the sidewalks.

The honey hasn't shown up at Kilbs farm stand, but that's next as soon as he wakes up the bees. *Allergy tip: A nurse friend on SI told me this six years ago and I have not suffered allergies since.... half of tablespoon a day of locally (or as close as you can get to your area) grown honey. Honey is minute amounts of processed pollen, and by having a little every day, you develop immunities that stop your allergic reactions. Takes about six weeks to get going in your system, but after that, no more sneezing or itchy eyes. I swear by it.

Daffodils and tulips are trumpeting their colors all over.

Tourists are already showing up. You can spot them on the ferries very easily. They hit their brakes when the ferry docks and race the gate to get off the ferry. But that sorta works out well, because when they race the gate, the ferry worker gets to hold up that all powerful hand and stop them with a face that says, "I don't care if your car costs more than my house, this is Shelter Island and we all take turns and play nice, you moron."

There are tiny piles of dirt all over the lawn.

New dirt means the worms are building below. Soon they'll be big piles of new dirt above ground as we watch the new crop of McMansions spring up.

Soon, we'll hear the iron songbird of spring, the John Deere riding lawnmower.

We'll start hearing the latest round of "I don't give a damn how they do it in the city..." stories of Doug Fedi dressing down arrogant city people.

We'll stand in line silently at the post office listening to someone from Florida demanding something impossible from our long suffering postal folk. We'll wish that there was a separate line for locals, and, knowing that it can't be that way, we'll size up the offending irritant as to whether we can fit their body into a small town bag because the large ones cost more....

Serious job seekers will flood Pat & Steve's and the Pharmacy fountain to catch the breakfast buzz of who needs what, where and when.

Men coated with spackle and paint will show up at delis with sandwich orders written on blocks of wood. I always wonder if their wives give them grocery shopping lists on planks...

The teenagers of Shelter Island increase the volume of their unceasing pain, "There's nothing to do here" and "I'm bored." My daughter always thought that these phrases constituted justification for drug indulgence. She didn't realize that these phrases conjure up long lists of house and yard chores in the parental mind. These lists, coupled with the knowledge that they need our money for everything, including drugs, gives us the leverage we need to get them to do anything at all, even though they can only do it halfway and half ass. It's just as well. If they did anything start to finish, correctly, and the first time — the shock would kill us.

For me, the greatest sign of spring showed up on the side of my brother's house. Clam rakes...two of them....nestled gently together in the morning sun. Their rusty baskets seemed to cry out, "Clams...clams...give us clams..."

Oh yes, the best signs of spring on Shelter Island are the ones we can dip in butter.

started mumbling about putting down the dolphin. Kids started getting upset about the whole thought of it. Dolphins are cute, after all. I'm a fan. The fact that it would normally have been so far offshore and that it was beached indicated that this dolphin had been suffering for a long time.

Rob Digiovanni, the foundation director, rallied some troops to help lift the dolphin into the back of the pick-up truck. The rescue workers got into dry suits, and then walked into the water where they put the dolphin into a stretcher. They then gave everyone some latex gloves and hoisted the 600-lb dolphin into the back of the pick-up truck. Everyone cheered and the dolphin team drove off down the beach.

"That was one heck of an adventure," I said to Tom.

"Sure was, man."

"I knew it was a dolphin."

"ADDICTIONS" READING BENEFITS CARON

A reading of Tricia Walsh-Smith's fascinating trilogy, "Addictions," was performed by an all star cast that featured Peter Bartlett, Jessica Hecht, Jackie Hoffman, Martha Plimpton, Chris Sarandon, and Trudie Styler. Directed by Peter DuBois, Producing Director of the Public, the evening at the Promenade Theatre benefited Caron Treatment Centers, an internationally recognized leader in the treatment of alcohol and drug addiction. Tricia wrote the play after her youngest brother Kevin took his own life as a result of his longtime addiction to alcohol. Proceeds raised will begin the Kevin Walsh Fund to aid those who cannot afford treatment.

THE MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE HAMPTONS

In celebration of their Eleventh season The Music Festival of the Hamptons honored Christian Wolfffer and Norman Dello Joio with a black tie dinner at the elegant Lotos Club in NYC. After cocktails a concert with Alex Fiterstein on Clarinet and Meira Silverstein on Violin preceded dinner. The Music Festival is a highlight of the Hampton summer season, bringing us exciting interpretations of the classic composers performed by some of today's most extraordinary young musicians. CMEE IN THE CITY

The Boat House in Central Park was the venue for the 2nd Annual CMEE in the City adults-only benefit. CMEE is the Children's Museum of the East End, a great edition to the Hamptons. The theme this year was mazes; each table had an herb maze playfully called "Hedge Funds" in honor of some of the Wall Streeters in attendance. There were cocktails, dinner, dancing and a live auction. Wonderful people for a great cause and a must-see destination – for kids and grown up kids.

The Gail Storm Quintet Gets It Going At The Vail Leavitt In Riverhead

By Debbie Tuma

By day, she's an art therapist who works with psychiatric patients at North Shore University Hospital. By night, she's cutting loose on a keyboard, belting out blues and jazz tunes on stages from the Hamptons to Westchester County. Whether she plays solo, or with a trio or quintet, Gail Storm commands a presence with her quirky smile, her seductive expressions, and her pure passion for the art of performing her lively music.

This was evident from the loud applause and standing ovation that the Gail Storm Quintet received on April 8, when they played at the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall Theater in downtown Riverhead.

Entitled, "Hot Blues and Jazz," this was a wonderful combination of songs from both great venues, and the quintet started out with some mellow blues songs. Gail Storm, who bears the same name as the 1950s actress, of the "Gail Storm Show," (only she spells it differently), lives in Huntington, but also frequents her parents' long-time house in Montauk.

She was joined in Riverhead by special guest Joe Vicino, on the acoustic guitar, who is known for his own blues band, "Joe Vicino and the Smoke Daddys." Also in her band was Adam Rapa on the trumpet and flugel horn; Mike Tucker on the tenor saxophone; Heather Versace on the upright bass; and Bernice "Boom-Boom" Brooks on the drums.

They all looked like they were having a great time, as they performed many classic old blues and jazz hits, such as, "Night and Day," "Beginning to See the Light," and "Wham Rebob Boom Bam," a fun song which Storm particularly likes to sing. The group also did a great Duke Ellington tune, "I Ain't Got Nothing But the Blues," and a Charlie Brown song, "Fool's Paradise." Storm sang a seductive, bluesy song, called "Peel Me a Grape," which is also sung by Diana Krall, and another fun song, "Women Be Wise," which was sung by Bonnie Rait and Sippie Wallace, who also wrote it. Another lively song, which was popular with the crowd, was "Mess Around," by Ray Charles.

As she pounded the keys, gyrated with the music, and bantered with the other musicians, Storm made it all look so easy. Maybe it's because she's been playing the piano (classical) since the age of seven, and she taught herself the blues music about 15 years ago. But on her way to study music in college, she suddenly switched to art as a major, and ended up doing art therapy as her "day job." Besides being musical, Storm says she is also "visual," and in her work she uses visual and musical arts as an alternative tool to heal patients in the hospital.

The other musicians who played with Storm at the Vail-Leavitt deserve special attention. Joe Vicino, who has his own following, is a master at the blues music, as evidenced by his great guitar solos. The two young musicians on the horns were Adam Rapa, a trumpet genius, who is about to go touring in Japan; and Mike Tucker, a very talented and energetic sax player. Heather Versace did some mean bass playing, and Bernice "Boom Boom" Brooks was fantastic on the drums. Each musician was highlighted, throughout the evening, in a solo performance, followed by applause.

After a 2 1/2 hour show, the band got a standing ovation from the crowd, and they came back for an encore, and did the great Phil Wiggins tune, "Fools Night Out." Throughout the evening, a cameraman was videotaping this entire production, to be part of an upcoming CD that Storm is doing. The audience was told that they would be part of "living history," being recorded at this special performance at the Vail-Leavitt. This new CD will be coming out sometime later this year.

As a musician, Storm said she has been most influenced by Billie Holiday, Ella Fitzgerald, Louie Jordan, and Count Basie. Growing up, she was exposed to singing with her family, in the car, on long road trips during vacations. "My mother sang operettas and my dad sang in a barbershop quartet," she said. "So we would all sing together, in the car."

Storm plays with different musicians as well as solo, at regular gigs throughout Long Island, including Tweed's Restaurant in Riverhead, Giacomo Jack's in Amityville, and Fiddlehead's in Oyster Bay, as well as in Kraft Bistro in Bronxville. She will also appear, along with Joe Vicino, at the upcoming Riverhead Blues Festival this summer. For more upcoming performances, check her website at www.gailstormmusic.com.

Vail-Leavitt Music Hall Theater, which is a wonderful restored, art deco building seating about 275, with great acoustics, is also having some great upcoming entertainment throughout the summer, as well as year-round. For further information, call 631-727-5782.

LI's Founding Vineyard for Sale, Plus Other Vineyard Notes

As of last weekend, my favorite Long Island pinot noir producer, Castello di Borghese in Cutchogue, went on the market for $9.2 million. The entire estate is included — 85 acres (25 planted with vines), winery, tasting room, warehouse and beautiful family farmhouse.

Before current owners Marco and Ann Marie Borghese bought the property in 1999, the property was known as Hargrave Vineyard — Long the Long Island Wine Country B&B Group. For four days and three nights, you'll live the Long Island wine life. You'll work the fields, learn tasting technique, blend wines along side some of the best local winemakers and explore food and wine pairing.

It's not cheap at $749 per person, double occupancy but the package includes three nights at one of four B&Bs, breakfast each morning, lunch in the vineyards, dinner at The Fifth Season in Greenport, and a multi-course food and wine pairing dinner event to round out the festivities at Castello di Borghese.

You'll also go home with a case of Long Island Wine, an autographed copy of Louisa Thomas Hargrave's book, The Vineyard, and a certificate ready for framing.

For more information, visit www.winecamp.org or www.longislandwinecountrybandb.com, or call 631-495-9744.

Island's first commercial vineyard, founded in 1973 by Alex and Louisa Hargrave. The Borgheses bought the vineyard and winery for $4 million.

When I asked Ann Marie what made her and her husband, an Italian prince, decide to put the property on the market, she answered simply "Marco and I are following our initial plan which was to be here until the children graduated high school and now we are structuring our next phase. The vineyard is for sale and with the time it takes to conclude this type of transaction we are starting the sequence." Apparently neither her son nor daughter has any interest in taking over the family business. Maybe they'd be interested in adopting a local wine writer and letting him take over?

Apparently there are several parties already interested in the property, but as rumors swirled leading up to last weekend, the Borghese's winemaker Stan Schumacher resigned.

In other Long Island wine news.....

Shinn Estate Vineyards recently announced the hiring of Juan (John) Eduardo Micieli-Martinez, formerly production winemaker at Pellegrini Vineyards and Premium Wine Group as its head winemaker. John is working with co-owners David Page and Barbara Shinn to design a new winery. Previously, Shinn's wines were made at Wolffer Estate by Roman Roth. Roth will stay on as consulting winemaker.

The house is expensive. Your mortgage shouldn't be.

No one has to tell you about the price of a house today. Just look in the newspapers or the window of your local realtor. While a lot of people negotiate to get a good bargain on their new home, a surprising number still don't receive the best deal on the mortgage needed to buy that home.

At Hudson City Savings Bank, we're out to change that. We've been in the mortgage business for 130 years and matching you with the best possible mortgage is our specialty. Among our features are:

- Competitive Rates and Pricing
- Expedited and Convenient Closing Process
- 90 Day No Charge Lock-in

Helen Smith Jones began sketching as soon as she was able to hold a pencil. "I was lucky enough to have two parents with art genes," she said. Her parents met in an art class.

In the late 1930s, at age 17 her mother won a scholarship from Hunter College for her art. "As a child I thought I'd be an artist. In second grade I did portraits and my work looked very different from everyone else's. The teachers and my parents saw my gift and there was a discussion about whether or not take private lessons from other artists. I was thinking of becoming an illustrator, although the thought of working primarily in a commercial field with my art was a bit scary. The reality of making a living as a fine artist is deadly," she admitted.

Jones attended Hofstra and Empire State College and says that most of what she learned in those years for developing her art was from talking to other art students.

Jones was born 53 years ago in the Bronx to a small family of two brothers. Her eldest brother, Peter Smith, is an architect and author. Jones edited and designed his latest book, a historic novel, Instruction from Seville.

"I spent a lot of time drawing and feel because of that I developed as an observer. Looking at photographs by Dorothea Lange and trying to do with a pencil what she did in black and white photographs was my goal. So the lessons I was trying to accomplish was being able to portray and represent not just the likeness, but the sense of the environment," Jones explained.

For the last two years, Jones' paintings have taken a top bid at the EEAC benefit, "Canvassing Riverhead." She has also won first place group competitions at the Phoenix Fine Art Gallery, South Bay Arts and the EEAC. The Widlund Gallery upstate has recently hosted a large solo show with 40 of her pieces. Private collections of her work can be found in Manhattan, throughout New York and Long Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Colorado and Washington, DC. She relocated to Riverhead 10 years ago where she at times opens her home gallery to the public.

"I love painting at different levels," she said. "I like being able to create an image that turns out the way I was thinking about it or feeling it. And if I don't get a chance to paint in my studio, then I get a real physical need to push paint around. I'll paint walls and anything else. It's important to play and do it just for yourself.....of course commissions are nice too," she added with a laugh.

The challenge she faces is finding the balance between her art and making a living, "And really just allowing those times of expansive creative energy to run wild. Sometimes my physical energy can't manage the high creative energy."

She derives inspiration from "the smell of a breeze, a glimpse of light and the combinations of sights and sounds all trigger memories. And often watching musicians and certainly watching others watch musicians," Jones shared. The work of the masters, Rembrandt, DaVinci and Vermeer has influenced her. The impressionists, some of the 20th century also influences her. "I'm just beginning to appreciate the more modern," she conceded.

"My dreams of an artist are pretty much where I want them, as I am what I always wanted to be. Mostly I get to paint when I can and I like having a one on one relationship with those who buy my work. It's a comforting feeling to know your painting is where it is supposed to be and has found a home. It's quite remarkable," Jones concluded.

Jones is available for commissions, mostly portraits and large pieces. By appointment you can see a variety of her work from monotypes to colorful paintings that range from people in natural settings to local places. She can be reached at 631-369-7351.

Custer Gets A Dome, Will Get A Telescope

The Custer Institute In Southold Is Putting Its Money To Good Use, Hosting A Variety Of Events

By R.B. Stuart

The celestial beauty of the nights sky is more apparent when viewing it from atop the new dome of The Custer Institute in Southold. After 60 faithful years with the old wooden dome, which was erected in 1945, the new 22-foot diameter steel dome planted on top of the observatory is the first of two new pieces of equipment for the institute. Transitioning to an updated dome incurred a high cost and it took many years of fundraising for the $80,000 needed for the project. The dream only became a reality due to Custer's President, Charles Cardona III, who donated a substantial amount of stock in his growing company, AdZone Research.

Custer's Observatory Director, Dr. Jeffrey Owen Katz, said, "The new dome is only one of the many ways in which Custer has been recently improving and expanding its services to the community. We have been offering more lectures and classes than ever before, as well as hosting concerts and art exhibits in our gallery. We are developing programs to allow students and educators to utilize our facilities, and we'll soon begin scientific research, which we hope will make a significant contribution to astronomy. This is truly an exciting time for Custer and its neighbors." The next phase will be a new 16" LX200 Meade Schmidt-Cassegrain telescope that will be housed in the domed observatory. It is a vital piece to Custer's existence. They hope to have it installed by the beginning of May.

When the massive pewter-colored dome was shipped by truck from the Ash Dome Company in Illinois two weeks ago, it arrived "in a million pieces." Over a five-day period 10 men were working on assembling it on the ground. Once assembled, a crane was brought in to hoist it onto the silo of the building. "It's much easier to operate than the old one," said Custer Institute treasurer Barbara Lebkuecher. "The rotation is smooth and the dome can rotate 360 degrees in either direction, opening to a wider vista than the old one, which had lost its ability to turn and began to deteriorate. It always was in need of constant patching."

At some point they hope to dedicate the dome to a former member. "This was an accomplishment that happened because of the dedication and generosity of members and people in the community," Lebkuecher stated.

Over the summer they plan to christen the pair of astronomers favorites by hosting a First Light party. The new dome and telescope will take The Institute well into the year 2050 and maybe by that time we'll actually be traveling through the stratosphere like the Jetsons.

On this Saturday, April 22 through May 27, from 6:00-7:30 p.m., there will be the first of five Astronomy Classes called "Binoculars," instructed by author and SCCC instructor, Phil Harrington.

Binoculars are not just for beginners and you'll learn why. This in-depth look will target binocular viewing in the current night sky and give tips on how to select astronomically worthy things to look at with binoculars.

On the following Saturday, April 29, there will be a lecture on "The Nature and Study of Cosmic Rays" with Dr. Helio Takai, senior scientist at Brookhaven Labs, a physics professor at Stony Brook

University, and a MARIACHI Project founder. He will answer your questions such as, where do cosmic rays come from? Are they survivors of the early universe? And are they remnants of supernovas?

The Institute hopes to have the telescope ready for their annual Saturday, May 6th Custer's Family Astronomy Day and Concert, an entire day of puppet shows, lectures, demonstrations, dinner and a smooth jazz and R&B concert by the Ahmad Ali Combo at 7:00 p.m. The concert is followed by observing and refreshments and will run up until midnight. The suggested donation is $12 non-members and $5 for children 13 and under.

The Custer Institute is open to the public for observing every Saturday night from sunset to midnight (weather permitting). The Custer staff will be on hand to assist you in observing the night sky using Custer's telescopes, and to answer your questions about astronomy and the organization itself. If you'd like to be a member of this 110-member organization of night owls, their annual dues are $45 for individuals; $60 for family; $25 for seniors and students. Benefits include: discounts to events, library, use of facilities & equipment, voting and election privileges.

They are a not-for-profit that subsists on donations and is run exclusively by volunteers. The staff welcomes visitors and are happy to show them around the night sky. To learn more about Custer, call 631-765-2626 or visit them on the web at www.CusterObservatory.org.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

KEN ROBBINS AT PAMELA WILLIAMS GALLERY

Ken Robbins' current show at the Pamela Williams Gallery has a deceptive, even a fearsome, view of reality. At least it appears that way when we go beyond the surface. At first glance, the photographs of the Hamptons merely seem "well-made" and striking. But Mr. Robbins' work is much more than "pretty pictures" when we consider his complete oeuvre.

This is not to suggest that his pieces are predictable, however. For example, a previous series seemed to present the world as a mysterious place, possessing mythic dimensions.

What is it, then, about the current Hampton settings which makes us realize that Mr. Robbins' signature may well be his "unpredictability," this time applied in a literal way? First, there are his compositions. They are primarily asymmetrical, an arrangement of objects in space that suggests disharmony and imbalance.

Consider the solitary tree at Havens Beach standing to one side in a scene overlooking the water. Or the blue-white heron ("Ghost Heron") resting in the grass. A sailboat at the dock is also placed in an asymmetrical position as is another boat in "Late Sail." In "Moonfisher," it is the moon which appears in the upper right-hand corner rather than in the more harmonious center position.

"Havens Beach," by Ken Robbins

Besides the use of asymmetrical arrangements, Mr. Robbins features another compositional element: juxtaposition of vertical and horizontal lines, like in "Havens Beach" and "Dune Stairs." This aesthetic aspect adds to an implied discord as well.

Mr. Robbins' disconcertion comes in other forms, also addressing the idea of unpredictability: subjects are frequently pointed (or looking) in a direction outside the picture plane to what may lie beyond. We often feel that what we can't see may impact at any moment on the reality we can see.

In "Surf Wraith," a figure is heading toward the left - hand side of the frame, a distorted image at risk regarding what lies beyond. In "Late Sail," a boat is heading in the same direction, with a similar suggestion of anxiety. While the bird in "Ghost Heron" is looking in the opposite direction (to the right), the unpredictability is comparable.

At times, Mr. Robbins' point-of-view exists on the vertical plane, rather than the horizontal (right or left) one. Yet disconcertion prevails in such photographs as "Dune Stairs" (where the action is taking place beyond the bottom of the steps) and in "American Spectacle" (where the "story" is continued beyond the top of the fireworks).

Mr. Robbins' exhibit will be on view at the Pamela Williams Gallery in Amagansett until April 30.

HONORING THE ARTIST: Linda Holt

"No, Virginia, we're not in Hawaii or Japan where Koi are plentiful, and we don't even have a fish pond. No matter. We can look at Linda Holt's paintings of Koi, including the one on this week's cover, and imagine we're experiencing the real thing."

While the above statement may seem out of context, the point is this: Ms. Holt's Koi images are so vital and authentic-looking, it's as if we are being transported to the places where they are part of everyday life, including Hawaii, Japan, and even Florida, according to Ms. Holt. Yet regardless of their realistic demeanor, the artist manages to capture the Koi's mythic quality as well.

Perhaps it's because Ms. Holt's style is not totally representational, but combined with a subtle kind of abstraction: luscious colors like dark green, orange, yellow and red merge perfectly with motion, creating an image that conjures up myriad senses.

It's easy to see why these special fish have mass appeal. Yet such popularity derives not only from an aesthetic perspective but also because they are considered to be good luck. Koi has certainly brought good fortune to Ms. Holt. She grew up in Philadelphia, earning a B.S. in fine arts from Skidmore and a M.F.A. from the University of Pennsylvania. She was drawn to exotic images rather than local scenes. Such a desire landed her in Maui in 1985 and there originated her penchant for Koi. She says she's "been chasing them in pure form ever since."

Ms. Holt also has a strong desire to go to Japan where she can experience Koi ponds directly. "In Japan, there's not much land, so people create gardens and fish ponds instead to bring nature closer. And do you know that some Koi can cost as much as half a million dollars?" she says as if to reinforce their importance.

Even so, Ms. Holt's Koi paintings are significant in their own right, not only because of their beauty but because of their possible therapeutic value. As she notes, "Hospitals, including Massachusetts General, are beginning to buy my work."

Ms. Holt is the first to admit she's also drawn to other subjects, like portraits of dogs, where she can capture their personality and rainforests. She's considering creating still lifes in the future as well.

It's still apparent, however, that Koi imagery is her favorite subject matter, noting that "I like to paint them from different vantage points. I want people to see something they haven't seen before."

Dave Evans' MINI – MOVIE REVIEWS

American Dreamz

Paul Weitz, the man behind the charming Nick Hornby adaptation About A Boy, helms this satire of a country so in thrall to reality television that the president himself (Dennis Quaid) agrees to appear as a judge on an “American Idol” rip-off to boost his popularity. Though at times bordering on the schmaltz, this is pleasantly pointed comedy. The remarkable Jennifer Coolidge is as unmissable as ever as the ultimate stage mother.

Silent Hill

If it's not the week for another CGI movie about wacky talking animals (especially a bird, voiced by Jason Alexander) then it's time for another film-adaptation of a videogame. That said, this tale of a mother searching for her lost daughter in a ghost town is surprisingly atmospheric, largely thanks to Christophe Gans, the man responsible for the deliciously camp Brotherhood of the Wolf.

The Sentinel

Walker in one hand and Viagra in the other, Michael Douglas unwisely steps out as a Secret Service agent determined to foil an insider plot to assassinate the president. The results are predictably uninspiring. Watching Kiefer Sutherland in action is always great fun, but with “24” on the air right now, this is entirely redundant.

The Wild

A New York lion finds himself accidentally transported to Africa and very much a fish out of water. This is the standard CGI kids' film, replete with the requisite number of celebrities voicing hilarious wild animals. Of course, it's great to hear Kiefer Sutherland roar like a lion and I, for one, cannot get enough of the new post-modern William Shatner, but this all just feels too familiar in today's market.

Scary Movie 4

The Wayans brothers have well and truly jumped ship for the fourth film in this sequence of gross-out horror spoofs. That said, not a lot is lost. With so much new and awful horror flooding out of Hollywood each year (Dark Water anyone?) there's always plenty of material and at least nobody is asking that this be taken seriously.

Thank You For Smoking

With a lovely title and a cast to appeal to all ages (William H. Macy right through to Adam Brody) this is a lovely satire on the power of advertising and the morality, or lack thereof, of corporate America. The comedy is slick and smooth, but underneath it all there lies a firm moral indignation. On top of all of that, it might just be the last time you see Katie Holmes out in the open.

The Benchwarmers

Post-Oscars and pre-summer cinematic pickings are always slim, but this is absurd. Jon Heder, David Spade and Rob Schneider play three washed-out thirty-somethings who form a baseball team to play against various Little League teams and live their childhood dreams. This is drab, derivative trash of the lowest order and all involved should be appropriately punished.

Lucky Number Slevin

Following Kiss Kiss Bang Bang's noir-lite lead comes director Paul McGuigan's star-stuffed offering. Josh Hartnett stars as Slevin, the man mistakenly caught up in a gangland war, but it is the supporting cast who really give this its sheen, from Morgan Freeman to the always brilliant Stanley Tucci. Not groundbreaking in any sense, but solid and entertaining.

Ice Age: The Meltdown

A welcome return for the prehistoric mammals of one of Pixar's only true contenders. The Ice Age is over and the frozen landscape is melting much to the alarm of the many celebrity-voiced animals (Queen Latifah, Dennis Leary and Jay Leno to name but a few). Even Ray Romano is bearable, hidden inside a CG woolly mammoth.

Basic Instinct 2

Fourteen years since the original comes the sequel that perhaps only Sharon Stone has been waiting for. The action has moved to London in the hope of acquiring some elusive European sheen to the soft-core antics of murderess Catherine Tramell, but otherwise it's business as usual. Smutty, dumb and laughably unsexual.

Inside Man

It's sad to watch Jodie Foster slip from one of Hollywood's most powerful actresses to the competent star of slick but drab thrillers such as Panic Room or Flightplan. This is at least an improvement on those, with a strong cast (Denzel Washington and the ever excellent Clive Owen) and fascinating director (Spike Lee, making perhaps his least overtly political film yet).

Take The Lead

Is there room for even one more film about an unconventional teacher working with kids from the wrong side of the tracks? The answer is no, but this is pleasant enough. The children in question act surprisingly well, aided by the ever-excellent Alfre Woodard. Hell, even Antonio Banderas seems to have pulled out a bit of the sparkle he so conspicuously lost a decade or so ago.

Entertainment In Town

review: a safe harbor for elizabeth bishop...by gordin & christianano

The Pulitzer Prize-winning American poet Elizabeth Bishop, who died in 1979, embarked on the most fascinating period of her life in 1951, which is detailed in Marta Goes' new play, A Safe Harbor for Elizabeth Bishop. Leaving New York, Bishop traveled to Brazil where she visited the well-known architect and political activist Lota De Macedo Soares, whom she had met only once, and did not return to the United States for 17 years, because the two women began a passionate relationship that lasted for nearly 20 years. During that time the poet established her reputation, battled chronic alcoholism, and survived an attempted military coup.

The playwright grew up in Petropolis, a mountain region of Brazil not far from where the two women lived, so her fascination with the subject is obvious. Apparently sharing a love for the region as well, the film and stage star Amy Irving, who is a part-time resident of Brazil, produced the evening and portrays Elizabeth Bishop in the one woman show. There is indeed an abundance of spicy material ripe with dramatic potential for an arresting play on the women's lives together, but Lota is missing.

Their interesting story begins when an insecure Bishop, who at this point in her life has published only one book and is suffering from writer's block, arrives in Rio de Janeiro. The poet has interrupted a freighter trip to visit Lota with hopes of refreshing herself and renewing her spirits, but instead ends up hospitalized after a severe asthma attack.

Despite the language barrier and her setback, Bishop finds herself tantalized by Brazil and intrigued by the self-confident Lota. When the architect chooses Bishop over her current companion, their tempestuous life together takes on a series of unsuspecting difficulties. Their subsequent power struggle combined with the women's uniquely conflicting challenges result in Lota's increasing instability. Bishop ultimately flees Brazil, returning to New York only to have a fragile Lota follow.

Amy Irving as Elizabeth Bishop

In addition to poetry, Bishop wrote short stories, and even tried her hand at painting. Much of the play has been taken from the poet's letters and her published work, often to little dramatic effect. Her splendid poetry is a highlight, however, containing some of the evening's more beautiful passages and allowing for Ms. Irving's most luminous moments.

Director Richard Jay-Alexander has attempted to disguise the play's stasis by using an intricate rotating set, designed by Jeff Cowie, which moves with each little scene change, in addition to projections, and he forces Ms. Irving to make inorganic abrupt transitions. The gimmicks, however, cannot hide the lack of drama in the script or the fact we learn nothing of the poet's inner life.

Amy Irving is a lovely actress and she does quite well by the inert solo drama, but this is a two character play if ever there was one. In fact, Lota may even be the more interesting of the two women, and from the playwright's re-creation here, it seems Bishop was the reactor to the increasingly unstable Lota. There is much that cannot be included by leaving her off stage, and this makes impossible demands of Ms. Irving. She is asked to bring the text to life in what amounts to a vacuum. We long to see the two women enmeshed in loving and fighting, and the more we hear about Lota, the more we want to meet her. The effect leaves Ms. Irving battling a ghost we never see and can't fully conjure.

A Safe Harbor for Elizabeth Bishop opened at 59E59 Theaters, 59 East 59th Street, between Park and Madison Avenues, on March 30, 2006 and was produced by Primary Stages. Tickets are available online at TicketCentral.com, by phone at 212-279-4200 or at the box office.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood in The Hamptons

Us chaps of the male persuasion are so used to movies being made by other blokes of the virile, masculine fellowship that we assume that all film-work should pound with broad-shouldered potency even though most of their footage is aimed at puerile 'n' pimply boys. Therefore, when a film made by a woman and starring experienced female actors comes along – once in a great, great while – the men titter and giggle and the boys hope for some more tented gynecological mysteries to be revealed.

The writer-director Nicole Holofcener, who has been frank enough to picture women in full, un-defused, head-on lights revealing their weaknesses as in her 1996 Lovely & Amazing. In her latest Sundance spun feature, Friends with Money, she dares the most explicit of gyno-exotica, the most taboo subject – money. Even in Cable TV's tell-all, show-practically-everything's Sex and the City (Ms. Holofcener has directed some), they didn't have the Chick-Chic gumption to expose their true feelings about their friends' bottom line. Their bottoms, sure, but financial bottom lines – never. In these films, women are full of all kinds of envy except over their friends being "better off" than they are.

The Friends With Money are portrayed by three near-legendary performers: Catherine Keener as Christine, Francis McDormand as Jane, and Joan Cusack as Franny. The poor little "don't got" is Jennifer Aniston, as Olivia, who gave up teaching at a private school in favor of free-lance housecleaning. Her three friends are a bit older and in good financial shape. They fret and worry about their unmarried-pothead-maid pal, a nut whose happier times consist of surprises such as discovering a vibrator in the bedside table of one of the women she works for. Olivia is becoming a standard role for Ms. Aniston's poor little unhappy-in-life persona.

Catherine Keener is close to director Holofcener and has been described as her muse. Her character,

Friends With Money

Christine, is married to her screen-writing partner. Their success has not secured bliss as marital partners. Money is spread liberally over their Los Angeles sprawl but sad Olivia finds it difficult to spread just a smile. Christine drags Olivia's woes through her sumptuous troubled home. Ms. Cusack's Franny is endowed with more money, ergo, more bliss. Her husband, played by Greg German, provides her plenty of full-time help and sex.

Cusack's rollicking style has been tailor-made for her by her marvelously seamless career. As for McDormand, what more can you say than, gee! Her Jane is a high-powered fashion designer who is beginning to unravel under pressure, a stitch at a time. She can't wash her hair. These three Dames of contemporary movie making deserve titles. Their extremely pleasurable film Friends With Money owes its color of money to them.

Primarily consisting of a series of vignettes, the film takes its real meaning through the performances. The director mostly suggests at "the issues" of, say, (ahem) materialism and, say, (ahem) the meaning of life when life is not mean. Los Angeles (the film's prime location), always the butt of movie biz, make believe Hollywoodian white phone luxury gives the perfect background for scenes of shopping, and, more shopping, and opulent restaurant dining. The script, using L.A. as a vehicle, shows nighttime barrenness and scenes of shocking surprise or belly laughs.

Nevertheless, the director never raises her voice above a comment or two. We get the feeling she wants to carry a protest placard and shout a slogan or two, or three. Instead, she speaks softly and carries a small stick, giving hints before she ever raises the little stick. So, where has the director gone?

Unfortunately, she's gone only to the city limits of Los Angeles. There's a big world out there and Ms. Holofcener touches only on wonderfully wrought characterizations of some women we know and, because of her, have gotten to know much better. Where are we otherwise? It is one thing to pinpoint women's "issues"; it is another to point a direction for aggressive inroads by women to positive goals and achievement. I'd suggest she read the work of quote, serious, end quote, women writers.

A style has been set by HBO. "Six Feet Under" and "Sex and the City" have set a titillating, just-barely-censored style of commentary but its pop-calculated content does not include what we ask of a feature film – something that goes beyond "issues." Us guys with the tough, five o'clock shadowed chins are giggling.

THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL

whispers in the dark

We're back! Dan's Papers FREE Film Festival returns Saturday, April 22nd at 1 p.m. with more chills, spills, pills, thrills, windmills, flared nostrils, and romantic entwining tendrils! Yes, sir! This week's movie has 'em all. So, get to Route 114 in East Hampton to the sumptuous Ross School Lecture Hall auditorium, across from the Wellness Center, for the best deal on the East End. Whispers in the Dark has cuddly Water Mill as a stage for a chilling churning drama of twisted sex, sadism, and bondage, not to mention a few murders and a terrific Alan Alda.

Suppose you find a naked blonde lady who looks like a Playboy model hanging around the house. Not bad, you say . . . just a kind of typical Hampton weekend guest. But suppose she's hanging by the neck from a ceiling light fixture? That's bad! That's a typical scene from Whispers In The Dark, a 1992 naked spell, wrist and ankle-binding murder mystery of the whodunit type. If you have no hang-ups and are not turned off by women hanging from turned-on light fixtures, run to the Ross School. But first, phone Dan's Papers, 537-0500, for reservations as a lot of people will want to see Alan Alda involved in a movie that drags blood and psychopathia sexualis from a very kinky maintenance room in Manhattan's "Tavern On The Green" to Hampton grassy dunes gone berserk, in Mr. Alda's own peaceful Lionel Train model town of Water Mill.

As produced by Marty Bregman and written and directed by Christopher Crow, Whispers In The Dark shouts loudly for attention with sensational scenes of bondage and sadism. They try to muffle the pandering with a satin comforter of shiny glamour and analytical observation, so much of it comes off like earlier television mystery shows, but spiked with explicitness not yet allowed on the tube. The link to television, I think, is one of the film's producers, William Link, who created a long chain of those very popular TV series, like "Columbo."

On the screen we first see a writhing nude that turns out to be a troublesome dream, soon to become a nightmare of psychiatrist Ann Hecker, darkly played by Annabella Sciorra. The girl of her dreams is her patient, Eve, played with bare honesty by Deborah Unger. She has been tempting Ann with mind-twisting stories of being strung up by her wrists and neck for fun and games. She also wants to strip her body bare, as well as her mind, for Ann . . . and does! Another patient, Johnny C., an ex-con/bad-boy/weirdo has turned to psychiatry and painting angelic nudes (what else) to adjust. His nudes are strung up and slashed from here to you know where. He is forcefully done by John Leguizamo. Ann is losing her grip and her boyfriend, so she turns to her university mentor and good friend, Dr. Leo Green and his wife, Sarah, caring played by Alan Alda and Jill Clayburgh. Then she falls madly in love with a tough-looking but tender pilot who owns his own airplane. He could be Mr. "Wright." Not Orville. His name is actually Doug, and he is played with a prominent nose by James Sheridan. But when Eve is found hanging like a chandelier, Ann thinks Doug dunnit. On the other hand, Detective Morgenstern, played by Anthony LaPaglia, thinks Johnny C. did it. Johnny C. gets angry and tries to decorate Ann's body with a razor, but she still thinks Doug dood it.....but no.....maybe her ex-boyfriend did it. Maybe it was the detective. Personally, I think William Link did it in the study with a typewriter.

Now to review the film's beach house in Water Mill. It's your basic beach place, minimally decorated with a frenzied guest or two, contemporary furniture, a few antiques, and cooked fresh corn on the dinner table. No, it isn't Mr. Alda's own house. He knows better than to rent a house for a thriller.....it gets wrecked.

To top all that off, refreshments and Sarah Halsey hosting for me, Guy-Jean de Fraumeni who's been playing hooky. Take a cue from me. Get out and enjoy this show.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer, writer and director of award-winning European feature films. He has judged the major film and TV award competitions. He is assisted in this column by Sarah Halsey.

When In Manhattan... BY OLIVER PETERSON

The Car Guy's Utopia

I've never been a real car guy. For me, getting from point A to point B comfortably, without spending a million dollars on gas is pretty much a home run. Unless I'm getting a cherry, 67 Mustang or a 57 Bel-Aire, anything will do. A couple of months ago my beautiful 1993 Ford Escort wagon (complete with tape deck, AM/FM radio, and roof rack) sputtered its last breath and I was forced to once again start thinking about what to drive. I had the pleasure of piloting a fantastic BMW 740 IL for my week without wheels, and the owner offered it to me for five grand – only about $80,000 less than the car's original cost. The problem, of course, was that should I have needed to replace even a windshield wiper, I was looking at a hefty price tag. The car was out of my league. I went with a 99 Camry LE with leather, sun/moon roof, and wood grain interior. It's reliable, it's comfy, and it rocks on gas. I love the car and have actually spent time and money replacing the slightly damaged wood kit with brand-new burl trim and I'm fixing to replace the old sunglass holder with a new and better one. Despite its white and gray two-tone paint job with gold accents, I really do love the car. But, boy, that Beamer was one hell of a ride. I opted for the safe and fiscally intelligent bet, but for a moment there, I was reading the various BMW magazines and discussing the car with other enthusiasts. I even found that my measly Toyota put me in the mood for perusing eBay to see what accents and extras I could add.

The point is, that while I said I'm not a car guy, there was a brief period last October and November that I found myself doing car guy things. I could relate. The Hamptons is full of car people. We've got our wealthy, classic automobile collectors, our off-road maniacs, and the import street racer crowd. Then you've got people like me, who look for anything to throw on to their new ride. Thank God I have enough taste to restrain myself from gigantic decals, plastic rims, and homegrown spoilers.

For those of you that really love cars, this weekend is your last chance to check out the 2006 New York International Auto Show (NYIAS). If you've never been, the show is the best place to see all the newest and hottest upcoming vehicles. There are over 43 manufacturers featuring more than 1000 new cars, trucks, SUVs, and minivans. But what's really exciting are the concept and production cars showcased each year. The designs are almost always jaw-dropping, they display all the newest and cutting-edge technology, and take us on a fun trip into the not too distant future. I've been to a few NYIAS, and it's an unfortunate truth that many, if not most, of these cool cars never come to fruition. They do, however, usually appear in a somewhat less cool and homogenized version, but most of us would never know it. Right now I'm pretty hot on the Aston Martin RAPIDE. It's got a low profile. It's black, long, and slick as hell. I'll also never be able to afford one if, in fact, it ever gets made. Look for it.

Like I said, I'm not a car guy, so I can't really tell you what the best prospects are for the actual production vehicles, but I will tell you that if four wheels and an engine turns you on, you should definitely cruise into the city and check out the show. There are four levels of exhibitions and autogoodness. Saturday the NYIAS will host the Cousin Bruce Live Music Show, and the Lotus Enthusiasts tent to celebrate the return of the Lotus. On Sunday, Columbia Pictures will promote their latest release called "RV," and watch for "The Corvettes of Westchester" display tent in the inner roadway. Just think: if you like cars this much, the drive in on 495 should be a thrill – and the show, icing on the cake.

The New York International Auto Show is at the Jacob K. Javits Convention Center, located on Eleventh Avenue between 34th and 39th Streets. Tickets are $14 for adults and $4 for children. Call (800) 282-3336 or click on autoshowny.com for more info.

TAKE A HIKE WITH KEN KINDLER

Buckskill Airport Loop

I woke up early last Wednesday ready for a hike, so I checked my website to see what hike the East Hampton Trails Preservation Society (EHTPS) was sponsoring. It was described as follows: April 12, Wednesday - 10 a.m. BUCKSKILL AIRPORT LOOP (4 miles). Within sight or sound of some major infrastructure (airport, recreation complex, rifle range) you can still find beautiful tranquility on an easy (flat) trail in the western end of town. Meet on Wainscott-Northwest Rd. (Daniel's Hole Rd.) just north of the airport where the overhead power line crosses the road. Leader: Richard Lupoletti (631-324-1127). I hadn't hiked Buckskill in a while and since Richard is one of my favorite hike leaders, I was eager to go along. I realized that I had forgotten to bring my copy of the East Hampton Trail Guide. I like to follow a hike on a map so that I can repeat it later on my own. Richard is the Chair of the EHTPS Members' Services Committee, so I knew I could purchase another copy of Charles Whalen's East Hampton Trails Map from him. Richard can be reached at the phone number above if you want to purchase a map or trail guide.

If Richard belonged to a Native American tribe he would surely hold the position of storyteller; I always enjoy his narratives. He began by telling us to pay attention to the vegetation as we entered the woods. We were about to enter on the east side of Daniel's Hole Road. "Note as you enter the woods there are many double and triple-trunk trees," Richard said that this is often the result of fire. That, in conjunction with the abundance of grass, leads one to believe that this land was at one time used as a pasture. As you head deeper into the woods, low bush blueberry and huckleberry gradually replace the grass.

Richard, leading a hike

Richard describes this area as an oasis in the center of activity because it is in close proximity to the airport, the railroad, Sunrise Highway, Wainscott NW Rd., the gun club, and an indoor tennis facility. "Yet when you walk into the woods you feel like you are secluded and alone." He also pointed out that this preserve sits on top of what will, in the future, be the source of East Hampton's drinking water. While Richard was speaking, we all heard the peep peep of tree frogs in the nearby wetlands. Richard explained that he frequently tries to get a look at these elusive peepers and lamented that no matter how quiet he is when he approaches, they quiet down and won't start peeping again for hours. He shared his observation that many stands of oak trees in these woods have been attacked over the last few years by gypsy moths. Many of the trees have been impacted so severely that they may not survive. In the winter, the stands of mountain laurel create islands of green; in the spring they produce lovely blossoms. This year, during the second week of June, Richard will lead a hike to the west side of Daniel's Hole Road (Miller's Ground), when there will be a profusion of laurel in bloom. Richard said that last Monday evening, when he had previewed the hike, he'd had a difficult time following the loop because the plastic red markers are disappearing. He came back early Wednesday morning and tied plastic ribbon to trees at all the important turns. Richard promised that this is a temporary measure and in the near future EHTPS will either restore the plastic blazes or replace them with painted blazes. The Buckskill Loop is his "adopted trail," so he has a vested interest in making it as friendly to hikers as possible. EHTPS still has some trails that can be adopted through its "Adopt-a-Trail" program.

You can become involved in EHTPS by attending one of their monthly meetings; first Monday of each month; Ashawagh Hall in Springs; 7:30 p.m. For information call (631) 329-4227.

This is a challenging area to hike; I had a difficult time following where we were, even while using the map. When I got home I referred to Mike Bottini's Trail Guide to the South Fork. That helped to clarify the route in my mind. Contact Richard for one of these books as well.

You can have great adventures by repeatedly returning to this informal parking area on the shoulder of Daniel's Hole Rd. and while using the map and the book, see how many of the loop trails you can follow on your own. Have fun!

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

Spring is definitely in the air and the shopping sales are plentiful. The villages are filled with shoppers and strollers, all ready to get their spring wardrobes in gear. My friends, Paula and Annie, and I decided to do some friendly shopping together. Let's do some happy shopping!

Just to let you know that right now at Rose Jewelers, you will find something fun to complement your jewelry and wardrobe from the brand new collection of Debbie Brooks handbags that are available here and at both the Main Street, Southampton and East Main Street, Patchogue stores. Of course, Paula and Annie each bought one!

Palm Produce on Main Street has 50% off select-ladies merchandise for all occasions. Nearby at Splash of Pink, you will find a "dollar sale" in progress and next door, at Mayfair Jewelers, you will find a half-price sale still going on as they get ready to open their new East Hampton location.

How about the Second Chance sale, also on Main Street in Southampton! The store is re-locating to West Main Street and everything in the store is 50% off until May 1..... You will love the jewelry selection, china, glassware, lighting, odd and end pieces of furniture and so much more. I have my eye on a special piece of furniture; I just need to get out the measuring tape.....I'll be back for sure.

We stopped into Harmont and Blaine at 38 Jobs Lane in Southampton for a look at what is new in men's clothing..... You will love the perfect, casual clothing for your sophisticated lifestyle here with their new spring/summer collection from Naples, Italy. Also, don't pass up the fall merchandise sale at 70% off (almost giving it away) of clothing and accessories, including shoes and belts for men. This shop sells only menswear and there aren't too many of these around.

At the Down Factory Store at the Elegant John

Down Factory Store at the Elegant John, East Hampton

John on Montauk Highway in East Hampton, you won't believe the "Spring Sale" that is in progress right now. There is one third off lamps, and their famous feather beds have been drastically reduced. Look for good buys on hotel towels, fine Polish down comforters and 100% down pillows. This shop has so much to choose from, it's not just a linen store. There are scented candles, shelving, mirrors, scales, hard-to-find shower curtains, Elta & Ahava products, terry robes, hampers, rugs, just to name a few. My favorite item here? The healthy, plump feather bed, of course!

It's about that time of year again! Prom dresses, prom dresses, prom dresses.....At Collette on Jobs Lane in Southampton and The Circle in East Hampton, you will find a brand new hot collection of what else? Prom dresses! They also have a special on all occasion dresses for all the upcoming events spring/summer. All ready to go, this shop has it all.....including accessories. It's never too early to start prom dress shopping.

After lunch we stopped in the C. Whitmore Gardens on Montauk Highway in Amagansett, to check out the new Sales Annex on the second floor of the main building. This shop is a full-service garden center that offers floral design, landscaping and gardening services, gifts and décor for the home and garden. The annex features significant discounts, from 30% to 60% off the original prices on items such as botanical prints, furniture, container vases, candles, potpourri and other decorative pieces. Get going, you have to see this one. You will love it!

Sag Harbor, here we come! I had to take the girls to D J Hart on Main Street for a look at the brand new spring 2006 collection. Dee has just revamped and added interesting merchandise for this season. You will love the large selection of Flax and Cutloose along with beautiful spring sweaters that she has just added to the shop. If you love the Bohemian-tiered skirts from America, France and India, you will find them here too. How about the ten feet of necklaces, bracelets, scarves, earrings and fun gifts for everyone? There is jewelry by Bijoux de la mer, featuring the much-wanted vintage, Lucite beads, sterling silver and semi-precious stones and 14kt gold pieces. And.....the best part? The prices are really affordable and there is always a little surprise sale going on someplace in the store.....

The day ended too quickly, we had so much shopping under our belts, we had to say goodbye.....See you in a few months girls, we had a great shopping day.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Spring Shopping!

If you have any questions or comments, or your shop is having a sale, and you would like everyone to know about it, I would love to hear from you via email at shoptil@danspapers.com or you can reach me by fax at: 631-537-6755.

Easter Egg Hunt in Sag Harbor

Photos by Christian McLean

On a clear blue day filled with sunshine and sweet breezes, the Easter Bunny visited Sag Harbor, spreading joy and jelly beans throughout the land. All the good little girls and boys excitedly hunted for Easter eggs in the lush green grass in Mashashimuet Park. The Lion's Club sure knows how to celebrate. —RFS

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

When Michael Rozzi, executive chef of Della Femina in East Hampton, New York, and Michael Carr-Smith, importer and distributor of New Zealand's South Pacific Wines, based and headquartered in New York City, sat down to taste a selection of New Zealand wines, an idea arose for a wine dinner to be held at the restaurant. With Carr-Smith's local New Zealand knowledge of the type of foods favored in that region and Chef Michael's forte for pairing food and wine he joyously envisioned the foods that would partner with several of the wines.

A group of restaurateurs and wine aficionados began the meal with an appetizer of Asian-inspired spicy local sea scallops pairing well with 2003 Crossroads Chardonnay, an elegant aperitif style wine. An exquisite salad of local North and South Fork ingredients combined beets, fennel and apples and served with a 2004 Mana Pinot Noir, a wine with pronounced red berry fruits. Rockburn Pinot Noir 2003, a fantastic wine, scoring 90 points in Wine Spectator, that is deep garnet in color with flavors of blackberry fruits, stood up to the richness of seared organic salmon with soy and tamarind glaze. New Zealand marinated lamb served in two delectable ways, loin and pulled shank, partnered beautifully with the soft, smoky flavors of Crossroads RGF 2002. The "wow" best-selling Crossroads Sauvignon Blanc, crisp with a fruity bouquet accompanied a luscious ruby grapefruit sorbet with cinnamon and Campari syrup.

Michael Rozzi's dream came true when this third generation "East Ender" took over the executive chef position at Della Femina in 2003. Here he has distinguished his cuisine with the appreciation and balance of local natural ingredients and the blending of flavors as sampled in the following recipes.

MICHAEL ROZZI'S BEET, FENNEL AND APPLE SALAD

Serves 4

For the dressing

- 1 tablespoon grainy Dijon mustard
- 1 tablespoon honey
- 2 teaspoons chopped fresh tarragon or 1/4 teaspoon dried
- 1 1/2-2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
- 4-5 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
- Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

For the salad

- 3 large roasted beets
- 1/2 cup dried cherries
- 1 large bulb fennel, trimmed and sliced paper thin
- 1 large Milk Pail tart apple, cored, peeled and sliced into thin wedges

3 tablespoons chopped toasted hazelnuts
4-6 ounces Hudson Valley Ewes or blue cheese of your choice

1. Whisk together the mustard, honey, tarragon and vinegar. Slowly whisk in oil and season to taste with salt and pepper. Taste to adjust seasoning as necessary.

2. Wrap beets in heavy foil, place on a cookie sheet and roast in a 425 oven for one hour or until tender when pierced with a knife. The beets can be roasted one or two days ahead and refrigerated in a suitable container.

3. Peel the beets and cut into 1/2 - inch dice for serving. Plump dried cherries in warm water to cover for 25 minutes or so. Drain cherries and place in a bowl with the fennel, apple and beets. Spoon over dressing and toss gently to mix. Divide onto 6 salad plates, top with crumbled blue cheese and toasted hazelnuts.

SEARED ORGANIC SALMON WITH SOY AND TAMARIND GLAZE

Serves 4

For the soy glaze

1/4 cup soy sauce

- 2 tablespoons rice wine vinegar
- 2 teaspoons tamarind paste, optional
- 2 teaspoons brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon fresh lime juice
- 1 tablespoon corn syrup

For the salmon

- 1 package Chinese black or 1 cup wild rice
- 1/3 cup extra virgin olive oil
- 4 6-ounce salmon fillets with skin
- 1 cup shelled edamame (available frozen)
- 6 ounces shitake mushrooms, cleaned, stemmed and sliced
- Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

1. Place glaze sauce ingredients in a small heavy saucepan and place over medium/low heat. Simmer until reduced by half, stirring occasionally with a wooden spoon until syrupy.

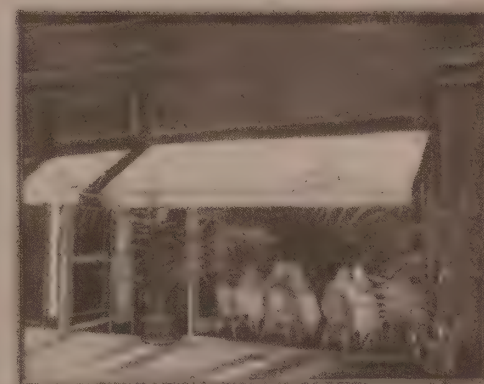

2. Cook black rice according to package directions or wild rice and keep warm.

3. Place a large non-stick pan over medium heat for a few seconds to heat the pan. Add 3 tablespoons olive oil, then put in the salmon fillets skin side down. Saute until the skin crisps, about 4 minutes. Carefully turn fillets and cook for 3-4 minutes longer, according to desired doneness.

4. Meanwhile, in a separate skillet, heat remaining olive oil and saute edamame and mushrooms for 3-4 minutes until mushrooms are tender. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Add rice to the soy mixture and toss to mix. Divide for serving and place on warm plates topped with salmon fillets. Spoon over soy glaze and serve.

Stress Less

Your job has been a nightmare all week and you're not going to make your deadline. The kids are driving you nuts. Yesterday, your car broke down and it's going to cost an arm and a leg to fix.

It's raining cats and dogs, just as you light the barbecue for your mother's birthday party and what's more, you just got a leak in the roof of your house. You've got stress! Yes?

We all, at one time or another, get a little frazzled and have to deal with the stresses and strains of life. What might stress one person out may not faze another. But we've all got our limits and our own tolerance levels and though it stresses me out to say, we do all encounter stress from time to time. So, how to deal with it?

Yoga, meditation and relaxation techniques are always good ways to combat stresses. But those are the obvious fixes. What about ones we might not immediately think about?

Cell phones, for one, are a source of stress for women, according to a study by Noelle Chesley, Ph.D., assistant professor of Wisconsin. Chesley says that if you're constantly connected to your cell phone, work worries are just at the other end to taunt you while at home and vice versa; when at work, family and social issues interrupt and stress you out via your cell. The study that Chesley did indicated that this type of cell interaction made women crazy and so she suggests communicating via e-mail rather than cell which, in the study, seemed to cause fewer stress triggers.

According to researchers in Ohio, whilst in a relationship, it's better to have "disagreements," (read: blow out fights) with your partner in a calmer way, using supportive language if possible. I know it's hard when you're at the end of your tether, believe me.....I know. But fighting in a constructive, calmer manner only benefits you. Couples who fight dirty have a 150% chance of more stress chemicals called cytokines. So count to ten, start again and try, try, try to remain calm.

Tie up your loose ends! Finishing up any odd jobs or chores that are constantly nagging in the back of your mind reduces stress, even if you aren't aware of the levels of stress they're causing. So much so that Michael Roizen, MD has put together research finding that nagging little issues like cleaning out your closet, returning phone calls, etc. can be more stress inducing than something more major like losing your job, or a serious break up. So stop procrastinating and get spring cleaning.

Those of us with a sweet tooth will be thrilled to learn that eating something bad for you might not be as bad as you think. In moderation, goodies made with real sugar (not artificial sweeteners), reduces the stress hormone called glucocorticoid. So after Easter we should all be feeling A-okay. Three Easter

Bunnies later, I know I'm not as stressed.

Investing in an iPod or MP3 player can also reduce stress, as long as you can afford one. The reason? Soft music is proven to reduce your heart rate and blood pressure, but be warned, if you listen to faster songs, your heart rate and blood pressure may rise. So, to relax, fill your pod with soothing stress-relieving tunes and take it with you so you can plug in whenever you're plugged out!

Our sense of smell can also be a stress reliever. In particular, smelling peppermint or cinnamon was proven to decrease frustration, according to a study by a university in West Virginia. The study was carried out to see how smelling these two scents would affect road rage. So bring cinnamon or peppermint candies en route. It's also believed that they can aid at other stressful times. Cinnamon is said to calm people and make them happy. Therefore some stores even pump cinnamon into the atmosphereand it's always a good trick to have cinnamon, coffee, and baking smells in the air when you're trying to sell a house. So smell is beneficial in stress-relief, and additionally gives a pleasant feeling.

The sun is finally out, the sky is blue, temperatures are rising and the lazy hazy days of summer at the beach are just around the corner. So follow some of the above techniques so that in 2006 you'll learn to enjoy it and most importantly, stress less.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

As the season gets underway here on the East End the East End real estate market gears up for another year of multi-million dollar deals. And this season, just like the recent ones, awaits the excitement of high-end buyers coming out here to put big money down on some sizable estates.

Rumor has it that Katie Couric, whose income will substantially increase with her new position, may also be adding to her real estate portfolio by looking for a property here in the Hamptons. The former "Today Show" host is said to be looking first for a rental in the area for this summer and then may possibly purchase an estate out here in the near future. The prospective rental is said to be in the $300,000 range but with a budget like Katie's if and when she decides to purchase a property here, the sky may be the limit. After all, there is a virtual smorgasbord of impressive estates here in the Hamptons to choose from depending on one's taste.

Realtors here agree that pricing, although holding steady, has gotten "real." It is a time where there is a substantial amount available on the market. However, the highly sought after rentals and sales still are leaving the real estate offices at a fairly steady rate. The build to the inventory really has not affected the sales and rentals in the higher end market. These properties remain highly sought after. If one is looking, however, in the more moderate range, say from one to three million, that is where you can see a larger selection of properties to choose from. In Southampton, for example, a historic home in the village is still a possibility at those prices. On the market presently on a quiet village lane is a classic Victorian, circa 1840 that is known as "The Rose House." It has been completely restored to its original charm. The home consists of 2000 sq ft and features many period details such as hand-painted silk wallpaper, mahogany moldings, thick plaster walls, hardwood floors through out and a corner fireplace. It was dubbed The Rose House because it has become known for the cascading rose gardens that completely surround the property. It is just minutes from the ocean and a walk into the village of Southampton. It has a formal living room, dining room and Victorian parlor as well as an attached garage. The home has 3 bedrooms and 2 baths. The home is being offered by the Enzo Morobito Team of Prudential Douglas Elliman in Southold that specializes in East End properties on both Forks. It is priced at $1,595,000.

In Bridgehampton on 2.3 acres that border a 10-acre reserve, one can purchase a substantially larger 3500 sq ft traditional at $2,900,000. In this example we can see that as the amenities and property size increase, the price of course follows. This one has a 20' x 40' heated pool, a master suite with a Jacuzzi, an adjacent sitting room and enough acreage to install a tennis court. It has 4 bedrooms, 3 full baths and a second fireplace in the living room as well as wide planked flooring and 12' ceilings. It has a 2-car garage, a professional kitchen, a large porch and a blue stone terrace. It is also being offered by Prudential.

Ms. Couric, however, could be expected to scout the more exclusive properties that are found ocean-front in East Hampton or Southampton. Or possibly consider one of the palatial estates on Georgica Pond. This prospect gives realtors here something to truly be excited about at the brink of this new summer season.

Dan's HAMPTONS HOME & GARDEN SHOW Guide

Welcome to the Hamptons Home and Garden Show

Welcome to the spectacular Hamptons Home and Garden Show, one the most unique and highest-end shows of its kind on the East Coast. It has taken nearly 4 months to cull the exhibitors you'll be meeting on the Expo floor. They come from near and far. Some are local, some from "up island," others from around the US, more from outside the country. But they all have this in common: they are all serious and committed to serving or selling to the East End. They value your presence, and really want your business. Never before in the Hamptons has such a wide selection of quality home improvement solutions been offered at one place and time. It's all here for you, whatever phase of home improvement you are in.....if you are considering changes or looking for inspiration for the future..... remodeling, decorating, home entertaining, landscaping and gardening. We are here to help you add comfort, convenience, beauty and value to your castle. It's a great opportunity to discuss your project with a seasoned professional, meet key players, or compare prices and quality. It's fun just to meander through the aisles and "shop the store." It's Miracle Mile-the Hamptons home improvement version, all in a huge tent in the middle of a Fairgrounds.

You'll see unique one of a kind products in collectable art, custom-made furniture, elegant wine cellars, rare, antique wood flooring, memorable landscape design, innovative lighting, lavish pools/spas, striking interior design-even one of a kind cars and pianos. You'll be able to compare competitive services such as painting, lawn care, fencing, roofing, chimney cleaning, masonry – and perhaps find a couple of new suppliers to replace your existing ones. You'll feel the pulse of the state of the art in home audio, video, home automation, luxury kitchen appliances and technology, and interactive home security/computer/entertainment systems (like the Intel ViiV platform house of the future). And speaking of kitchen appliances, you'll never see a display of this quality and selection at any Home Show. Every hi-end brand is here.

So why stage a Home and Garden Show in the Hamptons after all? Well, if you are not fortunate enough to have a well-established neighbor share his or her Rolodex with you, how do you recruit new service suppliers? How about gathering information in a place where scores of committed service suppliers are lining up to meet you and ready to talk turkey? Seems too good to be true. Welcome to the Expo floor.

Luxury living as an idyllic lifestyle is nowhere better typified than the Hamptons and not ironically, at the Hamptons Home and Garden Show. You can sit down, relax and catch your breath in one of our designer lounges. One is provided by the au courant NYC furniture store, Ligne Roset (and yes, everything is for sale). At the Hamptons.com Internet Lounge, furnished by Design Within Reach, enjoy free espresso and cappuccino. C'mon, we are talking about a couple of cool, trendy and comfortable designer lounges for you to relax in under the tent in the middle of a field.

Mercedes Benz and Southampton's Country Imports is introducing their new 7 seater luxury SUV, the GL series specially to you at the Show. You'll be the first on your block to see and experience it. Get behind the wheel of their $190k one-of-a-kind SL sports car. Tickle the ivories on a rare $85k Karl Lagerfeld designed Steinway piano. Yes, it's all fun and games as Putting Greens of L.I. hosts a chipping contest throughout the Expo hours over the 2 days. Sink a chip, win a terrific prize. Ask for Jim.

Tour the art galleries on the Expo floor, you won't be disappointed, believe me. We feature a memorable display from the Mark Borghi Fine Arts entitled, "Early American Modernists: The Stieglitz Circle." You'll see works from America's most important painters (Hartley, Dove, Marin, Carles, Bleumner and Davis) from the 1905-1930s period, such as the $500k+ Stuart Davis masterpiece. It's like shopping for art in the exhibition halls of the Parrish Art Museum, only better. The trendy Vered Gallery presents, "The Last Seating: A Marilyn Monroe show." Get ready for erotic (and memorable) photos by legendary fashion photographer Bert Stern in Monroe's last photo-shoot just before her tragic death. (Believe me, you'll want to poke your head in this booth and see why one appeared on the cover of a recent Playboy.) The venerable Elaine Benson Gallery will be selling off its private collection. (Serious art collectors better get there early with check in hand.)

The American Society of Interior Designers will be conducting free 20-minute consultations by several of their distinguished and much in-demand members. Meet one-on-one in a semi-private setting with one of the NYC area's top interior designers. You'll be inspired and amazed. First come, first served, as you sign up on-site...Bring your renovation plans, layouts, pictures, color swatches and an open mind.

A big aspect of this Show is the many benefits derived from sitting in on any part of our well-respected and highly rated seminar series. Carefully selected, each session is fast-paced at 30 minutes, user-friendly and filled with distilled ideas and usable advice – all held in the Washington Mutual Theater on the Expo floor. Our mistress of ceremonies, long-time interior decorator, author, columnist and radio talk show host, Natalie Weinstein, keeps the pearls of wisdom flowing. The Sunday afternoon 1-3 p.m. section of seminars is presented by Hamptons.com, and is geared for ambitious real estate agents, would-be investors and eager house hunters. Check the listings for all topics, speakers and times for the 2 days.

There is something for everyone here. Even I'll be sitting in on a few.

Hungry or thirsty? Not to worry, we have you covered. In addition to the coffee treats in the Hamptons.com Internet Lounge, Wolfer Estate will be pouring their fine wine in a free tasting, each day from 3-5 p.m., and celebrate the Kentucky Derby by drinking Mint Juleps, Saturday 3-7 p.m. provided by 80% Strong Bourbon. Lunching with us? You have got to try some, if not all, of the tasty authentic Hawaiian dishes in our Tropical Grille and Tiki Bar available in the outdoor Expo. Long-time Hawaiian restaurateur and chef Steve Biscari Amaral of Black Tie Caterers brings the Maui Island to Long Island by making his dishes and drinks (virgin smoothies) fun and delectable.

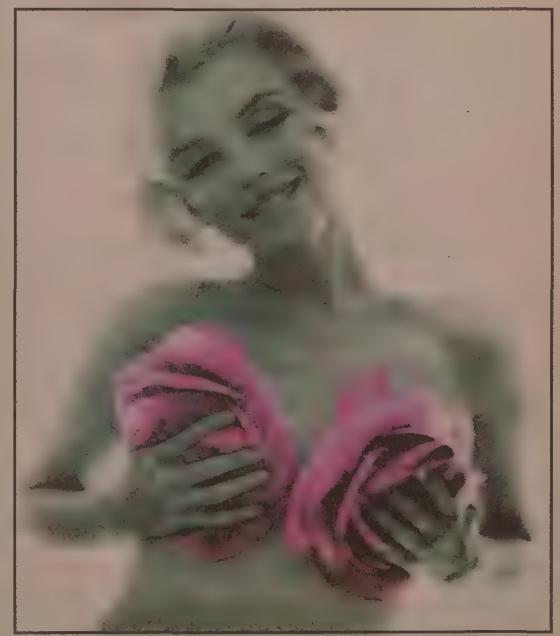

Speaking of food, here's a photo op. We keep the Expo open on Saturday, May 6 from 5-7 p.m. for an exclusive fund-raiser for the all-around SH do-gooder charity, A Helping Hand, The Human Resources of the Hamptons ("The safety net of the Southampton community"). And just $50 gets you into the first major Fund-raiser of the 2006 season (if Spring fundraisers come, can Summer be far behind?) Come see and be seen at Dining Out 2006; a Summer Preview of Local Restaurants and Wines. Get a tasting and review the menus from all the premiere eateries in the Hamptons and East End wineries. Meet and mingle with the top architects, interior designers, our speakers, local celebrities and fellow homeowners.

It's all here for you...resources, ideas, bargains, inspiration, and a fun culinary fund-raiser. It's what the Hamptons is all about. On behalf of all the many sponsors, exhibitors, speakers, and the hard-working staff at the Hamptons Expo Group, I thank you for coming. Enjoy the show and do support our exhibitors.

Dan's HAMPTONS HOME & GARDEN SHOW Guide

Hamptons Home and Garden Show Overview

The Second Annual Hamptons Home and Garden Show will take place in a specially erected, fully enclosed, 24,000 sq. ft. tent, at the Southampton Elks Lodge Fairgrounds on May 6th and 7th, from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. The concept remains the same: easy one-stop-shopping for homeowners. The expo on quality home goods, ideas, and services is conveniently being held before the start of the hectic summer season and is located right on County Road 39. Welcoming over 5000 homeowners from all over the East End, the show will provide limitless options at a time of year when homeowners need the most help.

New Surprises at the Hamptons Home and Garden Show include: a Saturday evening benefit, professional consultations by members of the American Society of Interior Designers, as well as a museum quality art showcase; and "Dining Out 2006; A Preview of Summer Restaurants and Wine" to benefit A Helping Hand, Human Resources of the Hamptons. Held from 5-7 p.m. on Saturday May 6th, the preview tasting of the summer season will host about 300 people. There will be food samplings by local restaurants, with menus & additional information, alongside local wine tasting tables. A grand piano cabaret performance adds to the elegant atmosphere. For more information on this exciting benefit turn to the Dining Out page of this supplement.

The New York Metro Chapter of the American Society of Interior Designers will be on hand, providing FREE advice to homeowners throughout the show. ASID is a community of designers, industry representatives, educators and students committed to interior design. Through education, knowledge sharing, advocacy, and outreach, the Society strives to advance the interior design profession and, in the process, to demonstrate and celebrate the power of design to positively change people's lives. Its more than 38,000 members are engaged in a variety of professional programs and activities through a network of 48 chapters in the United States and Canada. David Landy, the President of the New York Chapter, will speak on Saturday. *Please see Speaker Program Schedule on p 7 in this supplement.

A museum quality art show will be set up where consumers will have the opportunity to purchase esteemed works by famous artists, right off the wall. Curator Mark Borghi, of Mark Borghi Fine Arts Inc., will exhibit works from The Stieglitz Group, American artists including Arthur Dove, Marsden Hartley, John Marin, Alfred Maurer, as well as others. Mark Borghi is scheduled to speak on May 6th. Vered Gallery in East Hampton will display their Marilyn Monroe pieces, priced in the $40,000 range.

Like the inaugural event, visitors will have a chance to learn about home and garden trends throughout the show, while East End authors and garden experts conduct dynamic workshops and seminars on improving your home environment.

Rick Friedman

The Speaker Program includes exciting speakers like decorator, author, columnist and radio talks show host Natalie Weinstein – also the show's host, who will moderate and introduce all speakers; and professional interior designer and college professor, Ranelle Wayne, as well as other professionals in the field. Exciting topics include Changing Your Life and Home with Feng Shui, Secrets to Buying and Displaying Art, The Psychology of Color, and The Art of Food and Wine Pairing. For more information please see the Speaker Program in this supplement.

Food at the Hamptons Home and Garden Show will be provided by Black Tie Caterers. With 20 years of restaurant experience in Maui, owner Steve Biscari Amaral is bringing the enticing flavor and looks of the tropics to the Hamptons. Attendees can enjoy his Tropical Grille and Tiki Bar, serving tantalizing tropical treats and virgin smoothies.

The Hamptons Expo Group is founded and run by Rick Friedman, a Southampton homeowner. Mr. Friedman has over 15 years of experience in producing and staging successful Expos and Conferences around the world. His many large-scale events in the computer and filmmaking industries are considered renowned marketplaces where both buyers and sellers benefit.

Dan's HAMPTONS HOME & GARDEN SHOW Guide

A Castello di Borghese Food & Wine Pairing Experience

One of the most exciting and satisfying discoveries is to find the ideal pairing of wine and food. However, for a wine novice, this process can cause some anxiety, especially if there are guests to impress. Basic guidelines can help lessen the confusion.

I suggest starting with light whites then moving to fuller whites, lighter reds and full-bodied reds before finishing with a dessert wine or something heavier.

First, begin with food you enjoy. Think fresh and local and you're already ahead of the game. For example, what could be better than combining fresh local goat cheese, local leeks and potatoes? These flavors pair perfectly with Borghese Estate Chardonnay. One recipe that brings them together marvelously is Euro Dim Sum, which is easy to prepare as passed hors d'oeuvres for 30 people or as an appetizer for 10. It is surprisingly simple, and the pairing is satisfying. (See recipe on p. 18)

Another nice starter is a crispy, corn-fried Blue Point oysters dish paired with Barrel Fermented Chardonnay. It's a nice way to start a dinner, but remember that if you begin with a heavier wine then you should continue matching your courses with heavier wines. Consider your guests – are they hearty eaters or do they favor small portions? If they are the latter, you may want to start with the lighter, stainless steel wines as opposed to oaked wines.

When moving into the main course, pair according to the sauce of a main dish. Does the sauce have fruit in it? Is it light? If so, keep the wine light, too. Heavier or creamier sauces tend to go with wines with more oak.

Also, consider the ingredients are in the sauce

when deciding whether to stay light or go for something more full-bodied to match the food. Keep in mind that you don't want to overwhelm the taste with wine that too full-bodied for the food.

For example, if you are serving local Peconic Bay scallops, you want a wine with little or no oak. I would recommend a white wine like our Founders Field Sauvignon Blanc or Riesling. Both are fruit-driven wines that pair well with Peconic Bay scallops, whether served hot or cold.

If you are having a spicy pasta dish or something with hot pepper, I would recommend a full-bodied red like a Cabernet Sauvignon or a Cabernet Franc. These both have good structure and nice tannins to hold up to the spice. (A wine's structure is exactly that – its architecture, the building blocks it's made of. Tannins are astringent substances found in the seeds, skins, and stems of grapes and in oak barrels.)

Another interesting and unexpected idea is to pair a white and a red with the main course. This is a great way to experience two extremely different wines paired with the same menu. If you serve risotto with porcini mushrooms, Borghese Barrel Fermented and the Pinot Noir Reserve are two perfect choices. People are always amazed at the way the taste of the Alborio rice cooked in chicken stock goes perfectly with the Barrel Fermented Chardonnay and the bite of porcini mushroom complements the Pinot Noir.

In regard to wine pairing, some interesting insight came from a gentleman who only drank white wine. He asked me for a "steak white." I concluded from this that he wanted something full-bodied and offered him our Borghese Barrel Fermented Chardonnay. He came back to tell me that it was the perfect "steak white."

Remember, the idea is to experiment. Break all the rules if it makes you happy! Eat and drink with people who make you laugh. Otherwise, you are missing half the fun.

Spirit Ironworks: The Craft of Blacksmithing

Blacksmithing is an ancient craft steeped in thousands of years of tradition and mystery. The iron, the glowing embers of the fire, the blow of the smith's hammer create objects long prized for their durability and beauty. The metal rendered soft by the fire allows the artisan to create supple curves and sensual surfaces that can be achieved by no other means. This is the inspiration for our work. Spirit Ironworks is a collaboration between brother and sister blacksmiths, Timothy Miller and Rachel Miller. They were drawn together after four years of running their own shops on opposite sides of the country. They realized their cooperation would enhance their ability to create the kind of work of which they had only dreamt about.

The motivations and inspirations of Rachel and Timothy are different yet complementary. Tim is inspired as much by a well-made antique machine as a show at the Met. He has a passion for all aspects of blacksmithing, ranging from the simplest colonial strap hinge to sweeping staircase railings found in fine European estates.

The ability of hot iron to be manipulated with a hammer into organic lines and textures is what moves Rachel. Time spent outside with nature, the change of the seasons, the way a flower grows also influences her designs. It is this blend of opinions, influences and personalities that creates the backbone for Spirit Ironworks.

Timothy earned a BFA in Metals from SUNY New Paltz in 1998. In the program he was exposed to the high standards and traditions of the jeweler and metal smith. During that period he spent many hours pouring over obscure metal-working books, searching out tools and assembling a blacksmith shop. While in school he received an apprenticeship at old Bethpage Village and worked weekends at the Modern Metal Fabrication Shop. During the summer he attended workshops at the Penland School of Craft. After gaining much experience and knowledge he began to accept private commissions for architectural work.

His knowledge of technique proved to be a great complement to Rachel's art background. In 1992 she received a BFA in Sculpture from Philadelphia College of the Arts. She was drawn to blacksmithing after making many sculptures by welding bits of metal together. Gradually this became too limiting for the designs she chose to create so she began to study the art of forging. Here she was able to take her ideas to the next

Bringing the Inside Out

Until recently, when it came time to bring out the outdoor furniture, you had little to no options as far as color, whimsy or just plain fun. You had your plastic, metal or wooden furniture along with your scratchy beige cushions. Period. The only color to be found in the garden areas were the flowers, the deck around the pool was brightened up only by the blue water and the occasional floating raft.

This is no longer true! Over the past four or so years, the outdoor fabric and trim business has grown by leaps and bounds. There are now stripes, polka dots, fish, turtles, textures, and patterns. You name it, it can be found on an indoor/outdoor fabric.

The fabric and trim industry has become quite proficient at producing 100% solution dyed acrylic fabrics and trims that stand up to Mother Nature as well as the wear and tear of summertime fun.

Most of the outdoor fabrics that are selling today are made for indoor and outdoor use, meaning that not only are they going to be able to stand up to the wear and tear, they are soft and comfortable enough to be used in any room inside the house as well. Quite often, because the fabrics are considered child, spill and pet-resistant, these indoor/outdoor fabrics are the number one choice for children's bedrooms, playrooms and family rooms.

Generally speaking, the outdoor fabrics and trims are made to be resistant to damage from sun, mildew, rot, sunscreen, and chlorine. Fabrics and trims are also resistant to most soil and stains making them very easy to keep clean and fresh. Manufacturers like to remind consumers that although the fabric may resist mold/mildew, mildew may grow on dirt or other foreign substances that are not removed from the fabrics.

Although cleaning instructions may vary, the most common cleaning instructions for these cheerful indoor/outdoor fabrics state that they can be machine or hand washed in cool to lukewarm water with a natural, mild soap. Rinsing should be done with clean cool to lukewarm water. It is strongly recommended that the fabrics be air-dried. Tumble-drying is frowned upon as is ironing or dry cleaning. During the winter months, the fabrics fare best when kept in a dry and airy storage place.

All that being said, there is something rather fantastic about being able to have bright red and yellow polka dots covering your pillows out by the pool or lime green, white and orange stripes for your seat cushions on the back deck.

The wonderful thing about all of this fabric and trim is you are now able to bring the indoors out! You are not limited to those scratchy beige seat cushions referred to earlier. You can now hang flowing and billowy curtain panels on the back patio that can be left out for the summer. You can throw the most elegant of dinner parties out by the pool and not have to go through the exercise of bringing your indoor pillows, seat cushions and so on outside for the evening. You can now set out your great cushions, throw pillows, table covers, umbrellas and the rest of it in the springtime and with the exception of bringing this stuff in for the required cleaning, those items can stay out where you put them for the entire summer. No more schlepping back and forth, in and out, every time you want to be have a bit of comfort and color in your outdoor seating areas.

It is not only the home front that has benefited from the evolution of the 100% solution-dyed acrylic fabrics and trims, it is the world of accessories as well. Using all of the options now available to them, designers have come out with some really great and different products, available to those who may want to add a little bit of funk and fun to an afternoon. As you head off for a day at the beach, a picnic in the flowery field or a tail-

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Gardens without Boundaries

Those splendid English gardens that have vistas that go on forever are remarkable. Nothing is more uplifting than to commune with rolling green fields, trees, and flowers that appear to lose themselves on the horizon.

On the East End of Long Island, of course, most of us prefer to "wall out" our neighbors, and are lucky to have enough turf to walk the dog, place a lounge chair or two, and arrange landscape plantings that camouflage the surroundings. We are quite adept with fencing and screening to keep out deer, neighbors, and other vermin about which we may fantasize.

One of my friends, Brian, recently recounted a touching story. It reminded me of childhood and my wandering among neighborhood gardens, which, in those days, were often without fences (not that fences stopped me). Brian recounted that his grandfather, because of the onset of old age and senility, resided with his family when Brian was a child. His grandfather would take Brian by the hand and walk about the neighborhood wandering along the streets and into neighbors' gardens unimpeded by gates and fences. During these jaunts, and fully unaware that these spaces were off limits, he might take a clipping of a plant here and a sample of another there, returning home with his bounty. He and Brian would then transplant these treasures into the family garden.

Of course, Brian's parents were appalled by this activity, and insisted that Brian apologize for the intrusion. I suppose that was the appropriate thing to do. I find it refreshing, however, to consider the freedom and abandon his grandfather must have felt – with the thought that the entire world was his garden. Wouldn't it be nice, in this world with so many boundaries, to have that occur? Certainly a much better approach than building walls along the border of the United States and Mexico, for example.

This sense of freedom and expansiveness is possible, if not in reality, certainly by illusion in gardens. Even small gardens can give the sense of going on forever with the application of a few garden concepts.

Garden illusion and the sense of space is maximized when the shapes and textures are presented with some consistency, and in an arrangement that creates a sense of distance. I recently visited a garden no larger than 20' x 30' foot. Because of the arrangement of similar geometric shapes graduated from low to high in the distance, the garden appeared enormous.

The use of circles and ovals can also create a sense of space and provide a sense of scale not achievable with harder lines. Curved brick paths meandering through a garden create a natural geometry that complements garden beds and creates the illusion of more space. They can also tie a garden space with a house. Curved lines and shapes that are repeated in furniture, chairs, birdbaths, etc. further echo a common framework that adds a sense of space.

The use of a few signature plants placed strategically in the garden can also add a sense of space. Rhododendrons and hollies are especially effective at echoing garden consistency, and if used as a backdrop, create textures that add both height and depth to a garden without adversely affecting the sense of space. Similarly, the use of smaller shrubs and dwarf trees will add a sense of space to the small garden. Taller plants like bamboo, full-sized trees, and shrubs may add a sense of height but also reduce the feeling of space because of the proportional relationship of these large plants in a small garden.

The organization of specific areas or locations in a garden also helps to add a sense of destination and the feeling of space. Groupings of chairs surrounded by beds or shrubs, circular beds that highlight locations in the garden, and the creation of some hidden spots all add to the feeling of exploration – and size. If the design is clever, visitors will be enticed to walk a route and explore. The sense of boundlessness is immediate.

None of these ideas, of course, work in isolation. It is important to link themes and ideas. This can be done by selecting common textures, colors, or objects in the garden. It is amazing to see how one well-placed gazing mirror can transform a garden into an environment. Ultimately, it is the ability of a gardener to create the sense of environment that creates the backdrop for a "garden without boundaries."

The indoors is now out so you can wander outside on a sunny afternoon with your iced tea and favorite magazine to relax and enjoy some quiet time. You can now settle into comfort, whether it be on your bench, that you have cozied up with fun and fluffy seat and throw pillows, or your poolside chaise, complete with pillows and a fantastic outdoor throw that serves as a blanket as the air chills. When you head inside, it is with nothing more than the magazine and glass you came out with, as the rest remains where you left it for another afternoon.

di Borghese (continued from page 11)

Black Tie Caterers Euro Dim Sum Goat Cheese, Potato & Toasted Leek Pot Stickers

Yields 12 pot stickers

Pairs with Borghese Estate Chardonnay

- 4 oz goat cheese
- 1 egg yolk, reserve white
- 2 oz. smashed potatoes
- 4 oz. leeks split lengthwise and rinsed
- 1 oz. chopped flat leaf parsley
- 12 each wrappers
- 3 tsp. peppered scallion-parsley oil
- 3 oz. fresh tomato sauce with thyme

Method of Preparation:

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease a cookie sheet with vegetable oil, season leeks with salt and pepper, place in preheated oven; remove when leeks are golden brown, let cool to room temperature, cut in inch pieces. In a mixing bowl place goat cheese, smashed potato, egg yolk and mix with a wooden spoon. Fold in leeks, parsley and season with salt and pepper to taste. Let chill in refrigerator for an hour. Whip egg white with a fork in a small bowl, fill each wrapper with a teaspoon of goat cheese mixture and form sealing with egg white. Blanch pot stickers in salted boiling water until they float and remove them when al dente. Remove with a slotted spoon or web and allow to cool. Rub with vegetable oil to prevent sticking. Sear pot stickers in a very hot non-stick pan until golden brown. Serve with scallion oil and fresh tomato sauce.

Early American Modernists: The Stieglitz Circle

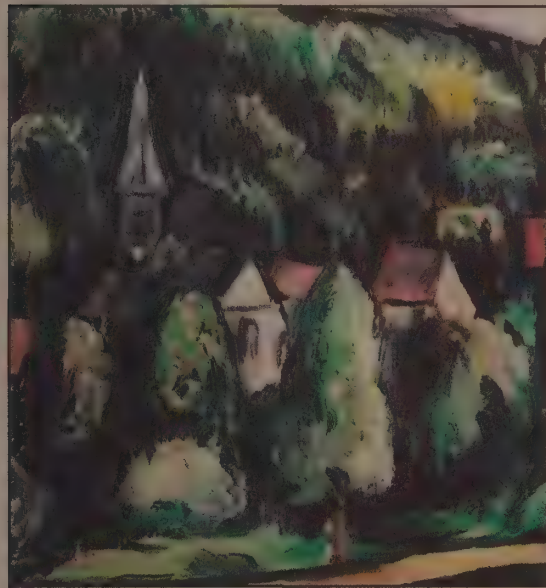

The Hamptons Home and Garden Show is proud to present a museum-quality art display, Early American Modernists: The Stieglitz Circle, hosted by Mark Borghi Fine Arts (Bridgehampton).

In this rare and extremely valuable collection of masterpieces, Mark Borghi Fine Arts will show and sell works by many of the leading painters from 1905-1930 – Hartley, Dove, Marin, Carles, Shamberg, Bluemner, Mauer, Walkowitz, Weber and others. Prices range from $20k to $500+k.

Alfred Stieglitz (1864-1946) was a great gallerist, publisher and impresario who made major contributions to the introduction of modern art in America. He did this by promoting, advancing the careers and selling the works of many of the most revered painters of his era. His close-knit circle of painters defined the modernist movement in America.

In 1905, Stieglitz, with the photographer Edward Steichen, opened the Little Galleries of the Photo-Secession at 291 Fifth Avenue, commonly called "291." The small gallery was originally used for exhibiting works of the Photo-Secessionist photographers. It later became a center for exhibitions of modern European and American artists. With the aid of his advisors Steichen and Max Weber, Stieglitz began his long and important career of exhibiting modern art in New York. From 1907 to 1913, Stieglitz's exhibition program at 291 began to introduce the work of young American artists, which included Georgia O'Keeffe, Arthur Dove, Marsden Hartley, Arthur Carles, John Marin, Alfred Maurer, Abraham Walkowitz, and Max Weber. The turning point for modern art in America begins with the Armory Show of 1913, which showed around 1,300 paintings, drawings, prints, and sculptures from Europe and America. It was an encompassing survey of modern art. Although not directly involved with the exhibition's organization, Stieglitz gave his support by serving as an honorary vice-president (along with Mabel Dodge, Mrs. Jack Gardner, Claude Monet and Odilon Redon) lending works from his gallery and endorsing the show in the press. He also purchased several works from the exhibition, including a painting by Kandinsky. In the years following the Armory Show, until the closing of 291 in 1917, Stieglitz dedicated most of his exhibitions to work by American artists. He exhibited O'Keeffe's drawings in a group show in 1916 and followed this with a one-person show in 1917, which was 291's last installation. Defeated by financial woes caused by the war, and his own uncertainty about his role in promoting modern art, Stieglitz closed the gallery. Over the next eight years, he focused on his own photography. But opening the Intimate Gallery in 1925, Stieglitz began what could be called the most important aspect of his career to the advancement of American art. He began showing the works of O'Keeffe, Dove, Hartley, Marin, and Charles Demuth. Headed by Stieglitz, level. Her desire to connect people with their environments led to creating home furnishings that were beautiful as well as functional. After a brief introduction to welding and blacksmithing in art school she set out to learn her craft through classes, working as a welder and visiting other smiths. In 1998 she introduced her line of home furnishings at an American Craft Council Show in Baltimore.

"Yellow Cafe," by Stuart Davis, 1930

At Spirit Ironworks the Millers use their love of art and fine craftsmanship to produce beautiful home furnishings such as candelabras, art chairs, sculptural tables and lighting. They work with architects, designers and homeowners. A large part of their business is also architectural work such as gates, interior and exterior railings and fencing. As artists they have the ability to work with a client, using their home and ideas as fuel to create one of a kind pieces.

When Rachel meets with clients she spends some time getting to know them and developing a feel for their space. In a recent commission the homeowner was interested in some exterior railings for an outdoor seating area and balconies to match. Rachel looked at the shape of the house, the arches of the windows, and the existing vegetation as inspiration. A shape of a leaf from majestic tree in the client's front yard became the basis for the ironwork. Both the client and the artist were very pleased with the results.

Pieces at Spirit Ironworks range in scale from hand-forged hardware to several hundred feet of ironwork for private estates. They produce a limited edition line of home furnishings that are shown at fine craft galleries across the country. The furniture was recently featured in Guild's Artful Winter Home Catalog and The American Artist Collector.

In June, after years of working in a small, cramped studio, Spirit Ironworks will be relocating to a 4,000 square foot studio and showroom in Bayport, as the demand for their work has grown over the past five years. They look forward to continuing to expand their technical knowledge and artistic vision while producing many more satisfied customers.

For more information please contact Rachel Miller at Spirit Iron Works, 736 Montauk Highway, Bayport, NY 11705 or by telephone at 631-419-1185.

this tightly knit group, through their association with writers such as Waldo Frank, Paul Rosenfeld, and William Carlos Williams, promoted an enlightened commitment to the art and artists of America. As Stieglitz and his circle sought to define an authentic American identity, they looked toward cultivating a national spirit derived strictly from the American soil.

In 1929, Stieglitz moved his gallery and renamed it An American Place, emphasizing his dedication to American art. Continuing an exhibition schedule comparable to the one he directed at the Intimate Gallery, Stieglitz focused on his solid stable of American artists – Dove, Marin, and O'Keeffe. Although Arthur Dove had not had regular exhibitions at 291, he became a fixture in the program of the Intimate Gallery and An American Place, showing consistently until 1945 (in fact, eleven paintings by Dove comprised the last exhibition at An American Place).

As the 1930s moved into the 1940s, the rhetoric of the Stieglitz circle grew deeper spiritual undertones about American identity, and its artists developed independent styles that blurred the lines between nature and abstraction. His relentless promotion of American art created new appreciation and new markets for this work, where none had previously existed. The current popularity of such artists as O'Keeffe and Marin is in large measure due to Alfred Stieglitz. His legacy continues to resonate today as his significant collection of works by American and European artists and photographers is strategically deposited in the following institutions throughout the United States: The Metropolitan Museum of Art; the Art Institute of Chicago, Fisk University; the National Gallery of Art, Yale University; Philadelphia Museum of Art; and the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston.

Laying the groundwork by his daring and courageous to embrace the new, Stieglitz foresaw the advent of American Art and the importance it holds. The painters he promoted have come to be known as the first generation of abstract artists in this country and to this day are considered to be among the avant garde of the early part of the 20th century.

At the time of his death in 1946, the seeds had already been planted for the next breakthrough of art in America. The Abstract Expressionists, had already begun experimenting with a new style and it was only another two years before Pollock and DeKooning changed the landscape forever. After a line of 700 years dating back to medieval times, the mantle of art history shifted from Europe to the United States.

A Room with a Chill

Wine cellars have been a home necessity and a source of merriment and legend for centuries, so it should be no surprise that today, every Hamptons home must have one.

It remains customary in many European homes to have your visitors press a coin into the moss of the exterior cave stone walls prior to entering the cellar. The greater the number of coins, the more magnanimous the proprietor who is willing to share his wines is perceived to be. Taste continues to transcend time and cultures to enable wine collectors, novices and enthusiasts alike to enhance their home dining and entertainment pleasure. And yes, a wine cellar does indeed add value to your real estate, as now it is almost an expectation to have one.

Here are some thoughts to consider in anticipation of your wine cellar undertaking:

Very important to note: you don't need to be a wine expert to have a wine cellar. Do not be intimidated. But you do need to plan for more space than you might have thought necessary. Repeatedly, customers who are just starting out fill up their space to capacity before they know it. As enjoyment of their hobby matures, they join a wine club, collect with friends, etc. Trust me here and plan now for expansion. Just imagine – who would have thought that Paris restaurant Tour d'Argent would be up to approximately 800,000 bottles with a separate room for cognacs, and Cricova in the Republic of Moldova (250' deep, 60 miles long) is boasting 1.2 million bottles. Skeptics of my advice – beware.

Any home is a candidate for a wine cellar, whether old or newly constructed. And contrary to popular assumption, by the way, the wine room does not have to be in the cellar. An increasing number of builders, homeowners and architects are incorporating the wine room into the primary living spaces upstairs as well as downstairs. First floor wine rooms may have an elevator that drops into the basement wine cellar, facilitating bottle accessibility and adding a unique ambiance.

Unless you like to dine wearing several layers, dinner is best served warm and outside the wine cellar. Refrigeration systems are designed specifically for wine cellars to maintain optimum conditions for maturing fine wines at a temperature range of 55F-to-57F. (This is very chilly.) Relative humidity is maintained between 50-75%. Cellar climate is terrific for tastings and hot summer nights, but not conducive to multiple course dining.

Custom cellar design and installation, like anything custom, can vary significantly depending upon many variables. Typically, a "nice-sized" cellar for many homes might measure approximately 8' X 10' for a capacity of approximately 1000-1200 bottles. The price could range between $25K-$40K depending upon storage configuration, refrigeration system and wood selection, among other factors. Typically a customer may explain, "I have 30,000 bottles- build me a space," or, "I have this 12 X 15 space, build me a cellar."

Wine storage has come a long way since the days of the Mesopotamians, who were the first to cultivate grapes to make wine around 5000 B.C., and the Roman Empire, which produced wooden cooperage. At that time, virtually all wine was stored in barrels. We cannot imagine wine cellars today without individual bottles and corks, which were introduced in the 17th century purely as a means to transport wine from the barrel to the table.

From barrel to bottle, the wine cellar took on a new form. Bottles are now stored in individual bottle racking, diamond bins, wood case storage or along a waterfall cascade of racking, among many

Color to Enliven and Invigorate

It is almost too painful to imagine a world without color. We have emotional reactions sometimes to the mere mention of a certain hue. Author Leslie Harrington, in her book, Color, A Stroke of Brilliance, noted some of the psychological responses colors evoke. For instance, she discussed how red stimulates appetite and is a smart choice for dining rooms. Blue and purple, she said, can have a calming effect, but green is the most restful color of all, associated with spring, outdoors and new beginnings.

Color enlivens, empowers and invigorates. And the palette choices can be mind boggling, which is why every year the color experts at Benjamin Moore

Paints offer a forecast, predicting what the color trends will be in decorating for the coming year. Issued last fall, the 2006 Color Trends Report helps guide consumers in their selections of decorating colors.

Lighting – natural and artificial, from sun up to sun down – is dramatically impacting the color trends for 2006, according to the report. The palette is viewed in three distinct ways – Luminous, Enveloping and Dramatic – based on an interpretation of how lighting interplays with the hues. Additionally, the report suggests, 18 Benjamin Moore paint colors that are evocative of the moods and emotions stirred by our experiences with light throughout a 24-hour period.

Luminous.....

To articulate this trend, Doty Horn, Benjamin Moore's Director of Color and Design, worked with her color team focusing on soft heathery hues that typify the dawning of the day as light begins to illuminate the sky.....the land.....one's space. There is a restful, calming character to these colors preparing us to segue from awakening into a day of activity. The Benjamin Moore colors comprising this palette include Fog Mist OC-31; Lake Placid 827; Pale Sea Mist 2147-50; Morristown Cream 1241; Pale Oats 2166-60; and Paper White OC-55.

Enveloping.....

Once the day is well underway, the colors intensify and envelop us. Daylight is hard at work, permeating and creating a glow. We find the hues in this group to be organic and radiant. Among them are Benjamin Moore Palisades Park 439; Amber Waves 2159-40; Pumpkin Patch 055; Victorian Purple 1370; Santorini Blue 1634; and Old Canal 1132.

Dramatic.....

Headed into evening, night's light exhibits a new dimension accompanied by the drama and mystique that darkness brings. The spectrum is sensuous and sultry, represented by Benjamin Moore's Shadow 2117-30; Stone Harbor 2111-50; Queen's Wreath 1426; Currant Red 1323; Vermont Slate 1673; and Stone Brown 2112-30.

Livability and Compatibility.....

"In developing the 2006 color trends palette," explained Horn, "we have consciously suggested colors that are compatible with one another, crossing over from each group.

"For instance," she continued, "Lake Placid, a luminous pale blue, can be used with dramatic colors like Stone Brown and Vermont Slate. We encourage a 'no holds barred' approach when it comes to picking and choosing, mixing and matching," she said.

Horn counseled that the Benjamin Moore Color Trends Report is meant to be a starting point for creating one's own decorating palette, and that, ultimately, the colors you choose should make you comfortable and happy, allowing for self-expression.

Consumers and their interior designers can look for the 2006 Color Trends paint chip samples inserted in 06 COLOR, the magazine of color and decorating inspiration published by Benjamin Moore. With a cover price of $4.95, it is available at Benjamin Moore paint retailers. Additionally, the 06 colors will be available as Benjamin Moore Color Samples, 2-ounce pots of paint that allow you to test the color on your wall by painting two coats of a two foot by two foot square of color.

To find a retailer, visit www.benjaminmoore.com or call 1-800-672-4686. Or locally contact Belle Smith at 516-578-1777 or belle.smith@benjaminmoore.com.

Benjamin Moore & Co., a Berkshire Hathaway company, was founded in 1883. One of the country's leading manufacturers of premium quality residential, commercial and industrial maintenance coatings, its products are distributed through a network of independent paint and decorating retailers located throughout North America.

The Rich Tradition of Steinway

Artcase pianos share rich tradition with Steinway.

Since the early days of Steinway & Sons, a company that took root in lower Manhattan in 1853, artists and craftsmen have seen Steinway grand pianos as blank canvases; musical masterpieces ripe for conversion into musical works of art.

For more than a century and a half, Steinway artcase pianos have graced concert stages, museums and private collections around the world. The first artcase pianos, or fancy pianos, appeared in 1857, just a year after Steinway's first grand piano was completed. That Renaissance revival-inspired piano featured ornate wood inlays and exquisite hand carving on the sides of the legs.

About 50 years later, Steinway formed an art department to oversee the creation of artcase pianos under the leadership of Joseph Burr Tiffany – a member of the family that formed Tiffany & Co. Under Tiffany's guidance, this department produced exquisite musical instruments that became wildly popular among people on the top rungs of society's ladder.

Steinway artcase pianos have appeared in private collections and homes of discerning buyers including shipping-and-railroad tycoon Cornelius Vanderbilt, and public venues such as the Waldorf Astoria hotel in New York City. The distinctive sounds of Steinway artcase pianos also have been heard in the halls of the White House, where one currently stands in the East Room. The first White House piano is on display at the Smithsonian Institute.

Steinway owners preferred Louis XIV and Elizabethan styles in the early part of the 20th century, while art deco – with its clean, fluid lines – became the rage after World War I. Since then, these pianos have varied in style and taste from designs with pastoral settings and Greek gods to one created in the shape of a log cabin.

Artcase designs have been achieved by carving rosewood, oak and maple, and have been adorned by leather panels, gilded moldings, copper shields, polished nickel and a cornucopia of other materials.

However, the piano that exemplifies the intricate design and craftsmanship that would become hallmarks of Steinway artcase pianos is the Alma-Tadema grand. Originally built in the late 19th century, this world-famous piano was recreated in the late 20th century.

From its egg-and-dart and lamb's-tongue carvings to oil painting, engraving, inlaid mother-of-pearl and marquetry, this piano was the crown jewel of artcase pianos a century ago ... and the recreation became its 20th century counterpart. Commissioned by New York millionaire and art collector Henry G. Marquand in 1887, the piano was auctioned at Christie's 110 years later for $1.2 million – the most ever paid for a piano at auction.

The recreation consists of 12 rare – though not endangered – wood veneers including satinwood, pearwood, rosewood, mahogany, Macassar ebony, purple heart and walnut. The original 9-foot grand was designed by famous 19th century master artisan and painter Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema. Painstakingly recreated from original drawings and plans, the one-of-a-kind 20th century Alma-Tadema re-creation sold for $675,000 to a collector in Florida. The reintroduction of Steinway artcase pianos in the 1980s actually was a celebration of Steinway & Sons' tradition, and like its predecessors, the new breed of artcase

20th Century Garden Pots Without the Heavy Lifting

Grand country estates were built in the early 20th century on Long Island and were often owned by industrialists and bankers like J. P. Morgan, Henry Clay Frick, Daniel Guggenheim and Harrison Williams. Even though many of these mansions have been torn down or turned into museums, some of the original garden pots and ornaments that created the outdoor sculptural elegance on these estates have been replicated – with a keen eye for authenticity and beauty – in resin stone.

These gray, terra cotta and carbon black garden pots, like their lead originals, have the look of hand-finished Italian masterpieces or well-worn antiques. "It is not until someone lifts and holds a resin stone garden pot," says Penoyer Newman, of Penoyer Newman, LLC "that they'll realize it's not the real thing. It would have taken two strong people to lift an original." She continues, "Yet, these resin stone replicas are light enough be picked up by a single person and moved from one side of a garden terrace to another." For this reason, many are used in city rooftop gardens for trees, flowers and vegetables. Some have even been used by rooftop bee-keepers. The more green plants we have atop our city buildings the cleaner our city will be because, as everyone knows, plant life absorbs carbon dioxide and emits oxygen.

Penoyer Newman, LLC has one of the largest assortments of exclusive resin stone planter designs in the United States and is introducing new designs each season. Some of its competitors, who make their planters out of fiberglass and plastic in China and elsewhere, do use various methods of molding that do not withstand the harsh weather conditions found in the eastern and western United States.

Manufacturing these replicas involves many steps starting with the creation of a mold from the original. The final castings are made of resin stone. Resin stone is a generic term for a wide variety of materials, including some tree saps. In this case, resin stone means resin to which about a pound of marble dust or powdered stone is added for each pot. The final result is an aged natural look. Drainage holes are drilled into outdoor planters for the health of the plants. At the customer's request, they are not drilled for indoor plants.

Many rooftop gardeners deliberately use Styrofoam peanuts instead of drainage rocks under the topsoil to ensure that the pots maintain their light-weight. Some of these durable and weather-resistant pots are large enough to contain small trees. It is important to note, if the pots are left outside for a season or two, moss and lichens will grow on them just as they did on the originals.

It would cost thousands of dollars to re-create the originals today, but thanks to resin stone, the pots live on in copies that are available to everyone and are reasonably priced from $85 and up.

Resin stone replica garden pots give testament to the fact that when you work with talented artisans and use high grade ingredients, you can integrate the beauty of the old world into the garden landscapes of today.

"The Last Sitting" – six weeks before the seductive Marilyn Monroe died. During the three-day session, arranged by Vogue in July of 1962, at the Bel-Air Hotel in Los Angeles, Stern took nearly 2700 fashion, portrait, and nude studies, of which only a handful were published at the time. This body of work has indelibly shaped our image of MARILYN. It has forever linked Bert Stern's name with hers. Both 36 at the time, they worked together to produce photographs of an indescribable sensual and human vibrancy, an unmatched climax in the history of erotic, fashion, and portrait photography. Rose Slifka, in one of her last reviews, wrote quite stunningly of Stern's exhibition at Vered Gallery, "Bert Stern works in the spirit of Picasso."

Vered's has been dealing in art in the Hamptons for over 30 years and is often called the best little museum in the Hamptons. An exhibit not to be missed, Vered Gallery's MARILYN at the Hampton's Home and Garden Show.

Master Your Short Game While You Beautify Your Property

The result of this year's Masters Tournament proves a point; master the short game and you will shoot lower scores. Phil Mickelson grew up in San Diego with a green and a bunker in his backyard. He spent countless hours around that green as a child and today he has one of the best short games in the world. Phil earned two green jackets in the last three years not because of greens hit in regulation, but rather because he was able to save pars and make birdies due to his incredible touch around the greens.

The Putting Green Company of Long Island designs and builds short game systems for avid golfers who are serious about reducing their handicaps. Jim Graham, an owner of the company and an avid golfer himself, knows that confidence is essential to winning your fight for the club championship. "A player able to sink a four foot putt under pressure is likely to take home the first place trophy," says Graham. "With your own green, you can practice those meaningful short putts, repeatedly. Sinking 20 putts in a row at home will instill a positive attitude you can take to the course."

Putting, an import aspect of the short game, is just one of the many skills you can practice on the synthetic impact greens built by The Putting Green Company of Long Island. Impact is the key word, since Jim's company installs greens designed to accept incoming shots like real bent grass. "There are essentially two types of materials to choose from when considering the purchase of a synthetic putting green," says Graham, "nylon or silica sand filled polypropylene. The latter allows individuals to practice all the facets of the short game; putting, chipping, pitching and approach shots from over 150 yards if the homeowner has enough property." Graham goes on to say, "If you are able to spin a ball back on bent grass, you will be able to do so as well on our greens."

A new generation of synthetic turf has made owning your own backyard green a reality. Depending on size, the cost is usually less than a pool or a tennis court. The key difference between bent grass and a synthetic green is the maintenance. "We have replaced natural greens with our turf since homeowners are finding the cost to maintain bent grass prohibitive," says Graham. "Also, our greens are playable all year long."

Solar Energy: Today's Smart Solution

This past year the total cost of electricity on Long Island rose more than 20% as the price of fossil fuels soared; gasoline prices are continuing to rise as they often do as the warm weather settles in over the East End. Many towns, including Southampton, struggle to contain these costs while working within the framework of sustainability, which is based on renewable energy.

The two principal sources of renewable energy are solar and wind power. The latter has faced opponents as far away as Nantucket, whose concerns over offshore wind farms confound its proponents. The former, solar energy, is generated at their site; solar modules or panels are the heart of systems, which are installed on the roofs of houses and businesses. The sun's energy is converted to electricity and fed to transformers or inverters, which supply clean and usable current.

The technology has been around for a while and advancements have been evolutionary – but now several countries are racing to adopt this free and continuous source of power, as concerns escalate over political instability in the Middle East, dwindling supplies and the resulting rise in the cost of fossil fuels. The pollution to our air and water underscores the rationale of renewable energy.

The solar electric industry is growing at more than 30% a year worldwide, without an end in sight, as countries like Germany, Israel and Japan seek independence from oil. Germany has adopted a goal to be fossil fuel independent by 2050. California has made an unusually large commitment to conversion to solar power by implementing a ten-year program backed by almost $3 billion in subsidies and direct investments. New Jersey set its sights on a renewable energy agenda with a 20% target for electricity by 2020. Solar now makes sense, economically and environmentally.

Many see a timely opportunity on Long Island to take advantage of the current $3.75/watt rebate offered by LIPA to homeowners – non-for-profit organizations can receive as much as $4.75/watt as part of LIPA's Solar Pioneer Program – additionally there are two Energy Income Tax Credits, which further reduce the net cost of solar electric systems.

The Federal Income Tax Credit offers a 30% credit on the net cost of each system (after the LIPA Rebate). This credit is capped at $2,000 for homeowners, but is open-ended for commercial systems – which many see as a compelling opportunity for local businesses to make their move to solar power.

New York State offers a 25% credit which has a $3,750 limit for residential applications; at this time, there is no parallel credit for businesses.

The bottom line is an apparent sweet spot to adopt solar energy as the cornerstone of energy independence and an important opportunity for individual contribution to pollution reduction.

The simplicity of these systems is also driving the adoption of this energy form. There are no moving parts and a standard warranty of 25 years on the performance of the solar panels underscores this now familiar technology.

Are you a candidate for solar? The most important site issue is a sunny roof.

Great Interiors Begin with Great Floors

For the past seven years there has been a wonderful renaissance and return to traditional architecture. It is responsible for restoring the Hamptons to its original Colonial heritage. It has created a wonderful architectural harmony between where we live and the towns and villages we love so much. It's what makes us unique. It's what makes us great.

So when designing a traditional home, there also must be harmony between the architecture and interior design. There are three major interior architectural features that must work together visually to achieve a great interior. They are kitchens, staircases and flooring. For the purpose of this article, we will focus on the floors.

Traditional interior design is about elegance and simplicity. And with floors representing one-third of the visual space, there is no better way to achieve that than using traditional wide plank hardwood flooring as part of your interior design plan. Wide plank floors are a perfect balance between new and old, and provide enduring quality and timeless elegance. The unique and distinct quality of these floors can transform your interior from ordinary to extraordinary.

But the selection of these beautiful floors must be made carefully. Unique character does make a definite statement, and will impact later design decisions like color palette, furnishings, fabrics, kitchen, and staircase design. The interior designer must be involved in the beginning of the project to ensure the harmony.

There are many choices available in wide plank floors, all with a rich color palette to satisfy any designer's desire. These floors are a work of art all by themselves. Here is a selection of some of my favorites.

I love Cherry for its deep red patina and brilliant glow of softer reds and light grain. Hickory is wonderful for its variety of honey tones and amber radiance. Walnut is handsome because of its deep, rich, true brown tones that express classic elegance. Two other excellent choices for traditional floors are the soft woods, which are pines, and reclaimed lumber, including barn wood for a more relaxed, country feel.

Take the opportunity to familiarize yourself with all the selections and their characteristics. It will truly enhance your appreciation of what wide plank floors contribute to the design.

As far as staining goes, the only two floors I believe in staining are white oak and soft pines. Their neutral color palette provides a perfect canvas to create great colors and mood. As far as the other wide plank floors, I am not in favor of stain. I believe they are selected for their natural beauty and should only be enhanced with a beautiful protective finish.

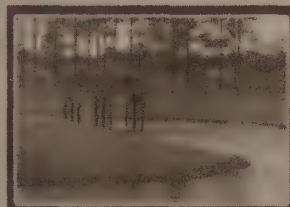

Finishing is where the unique colors, characteristics and ambiance of the wood come alive. It is the phase where the floors develop their identity and acquire their distinction as a luxury product. Finishes provide both beauty and protection. Here are three choices for finishing your floors. Tung oil has an amber tone and a furniture-like finish and is more delicate in nature. Swedish waterborne is a true clear coat with great protection. Oil polyurethane is amber in color with a thicker coat and great protection, but not right for every floor.

Installing and finishing a luxury product like traditional hardwood, wide-plank flooring should only be entrusted to a knowledgeable and skilled craftsman. Proper installation is critical to the floor's appearance, durability and longevity. Both installing and finishing these floors should be a very thoughtful and careful process.

Investing in high-end flooring becomes achievable when you start out with a focused and balanced design budget, with a smart and efficient remodeling process. This ensures that overspending in needless areas and wasteful construction practices are eliminated. If you follow this strategy you will be amazed at what you can afford and the elegant design that can be achieved.

Creating Unique Spaces: Blossom Haven Interior Design

Stairwells and hallways – there's nothing like old ones for imparting doom and gloom between the larger, light-filled rooms they connect. With careful consideration of color and minor restructuring of entryways, however, claustrophobic can become cozy, inviting, and tie a whole house together. This is exactly the kind of solution interior designer Erica-Lynn Huberty, of Blossom Haven Interior Design in North Haven, employed for her own home, a 1953 bungalow she converted into a two-story shingle traditional.

The original house provided both opportunity and a conundrum for the designer, who lives and works in the now five-bedroom house with her husband and son. "The house had great bones – a really sound structure – and a simple layout, easy to add onto without adding a lot of square footage," says Ms. Huberty. "We weren't interested in vast spaces and high ceilings."

What she was interested in was creating a welcoming cottage-style home that reflected a sense of history and allowed for the artistic expression that comes naturally to her family. "We're a group of musicians, artists and writers, and lovers of literature, history, and nature in our house," she explains. "In other words, we've got a lot of stuff!" she adds with a laugh. "And a lot of friends and family who love to visit."

So how does one create spacious interiors while maintaining the authenticity of a Bloomsbury-style cottage you, like the designer, may love? "The rooms in this house are situated directly off of two main hallways – one up, one down – with the stairwell itself taking up very little space," Ms. Huberty explains. "Space is not wasted. Most homes built prior to World War I would not have built 900 sq. ft. entryways and seven-foot wide halls the way we tend to now. And yes, people were shorter then, but they were also more practical," she adds with a smile.

But back to those claustrophobic hallways and stairwells. "We ended up with exactly that," laughs Ms. Huberty. Undaunted, however, the designer set about making the best of these features, ending up with unique spaces that tie the décor of the whole house together. By widening two doorways that connected the living room to the front hall and the living room to the kitchen, Huberty created a flow-through and allowed light to flood the once-dark entryway. Light also streams down the stairwell, which she left partially open and clad with bead-board, from a French door in the upstairs hall.

Antique prints and beloved oil paintings and photographs line all the walls of the halls and create visual interest, and care was taken to finish all the wood work authentically – "No slapping on poly!" says Ms. Huberty (restorer Erin O'Donnell of EMOD Arts, Brooklyn, hand-rubbed a custom mix of shellac on the banisters and newel posts, then followed up with beeswax polish).

A color expert, when she can't quite find the right shade Ms. Huberty mixes it herself. Lush, subtle shades of greens and blues make their way through the hallways and each room of the house. Except for a surprising, sunny burst of yellow in the living room. "A yellow sitting room is very English," she says, explaining that her childhood, spent in the Hamptons interspersed with many visits to England where her sister lives, instilled in her "ideas on how to make the most of those dreary grey winter and spring days when you're stuck inside."

Ms. Huberty's custom paint colors can be found at Emporium Hardware in Sag Harbor where they have been cataloged as Benjamin Moore custom colors (Haven's Egg, Blossom Bay, and Blossom Sage are three exceptional shades of blue-green. Blossom English Yellow should be mixed 2-to-1 with Benjamin Moore latex glaze for an ideal finish).

Moving On

As a person who has moved quite a bit during my adult life, I can tell you it's no joy. There are so many issues to attend to that it can literally drive you nuts. The stress of relocating, finding a suitable house or apartment, acclimating yourself to a new job – all of these things add up to a heck of a lot of headaches. Not to mention that you're now faced with moving tons of stuff that you didn't even know you had tucked away in that spare closet! Well, I'm going to try to help make your moving experience a little easier, having learned the hard way that it's best to plan ahead.

The most important thing I can recommend to you is to make a list. Before you start packing anything, create a computer printout list of your items or write them down in a notebook. Put a number on every box and list the contents of the box on your list. Be specific when you describe the contents of each box: "A-C documents" is much better than just "documents." And don't use the word "miscellaneous" anywhere. Most often you will totally forget what's inside the box when it comes times to check its contents. Better to write a brief description of the more important items than to play guessing games later.

You need boxes. Let me repeat. You need boxes – and more than you think you need. Having lots of boxes will make your life a lot easier. There is nothing worse than finding yourself short on boxes when the mover is coming the next day. That means you will have to go out and buy more boxes or spend more time boxing items when the mover arrives: not an efficient use of time. I strongly advise keeping about a dozen or so boxes set aside to use for last minute items on moving day, such as bedding, clothing, and cleaning supplies. You'll need strong plastic packing tape to close up the boxes securely. Use unprinted newsprint (newspaper can stain your items) or packing paper or bubble wrap to wrap and cushion household goods. And don't make your boxes too heavy! It makes them unwieldy and the bottom could give way.

Wardrobe boxes are perfect for bulky, lightweight items such as comforters, pillows, and blankets, as well as clothes that need to remain hanging. Call your mover to ask the width of the wardrobe boxes they'll be bringing. Then measure the clothes in your closets (including coat closets) to see how many wardrobe boxes you'll need. You can also use them for closet storage boxes, shoeboxes, and other bulky items such as fabric bolts, large baskets, or gift-wrap tubes.

Most moving companies will gladly deliver boxes ahead of your moving day. Or if you're doing the move yourself, get things organized as early as possible. A few days before your move, fill some sturdy handled shopping bags with bulky closet items such as shoes, sweaters, belts, and jeans. On moving day, fill the bottom of the wardrobe boxes with some of the shopping bags, then add your hanging clothing. Pack hanging items tightly so things won't move around and fall off of hangers. Finally, cover the shoulders of your clothes (a dry cleaning bag works well) and then add a few purses or sweaters on top. You'll have fewer boxes, and closet items will remain together. Also, the shopping bags will make it easier to retrieve your belongings from the bottoms of a tall wardrobe box.

You may want to try using colored stickers on the boxes near the box number – "green" for "living room," "blue" for "kitchen," and so on. Put a matching sticker on the door to each room. The movers will know where to put everything when they arrive at the destination.

Finally, keep things together. Keep bookends with books, light bulbs with lamps, and extension cords with appliances. Anything you can pack ahead will save you time on moving day. And remember to keep your valuable possessions, such as jewelry, silverware, collectibles, or antiques with you. Check your homeowner's insurance to see how you are covered during the move, and if you need additional insurance from the mover. Also, find out what paperwork (receipts, appraisals, and photos) you might need to file a claim in case of loss. There, I've just made your life a little easier. Now, where do you want this box?

Spring Cleaning for Your Kitchen

This Easter has put me at the end of my rope. It wasn't the holiday, it wasn't the influx of family and friends, or the Easter Bunny leaving his droppings all over the house. The problem was with my kitchen. It is simply too small. There's no room for storage. As I write this, a five-pound bag of sugar and a half-pound bag of flour sit on the counter because there is no room on the shelves to store them. To make matters worse, the space that was once used for the flour and sugar is filled with bulky boxes of pasta, jars of dried herbs and hundreds of other little things that are needed to cook the perfect whatever – do I really need cream of tarter taking up so much room? It's time to do a little spring cleaning in my kitchen. The rest of my house can wait until next week, or May for all I care, but the kitchen must be fixed.

Shelf and counter space are so precious in a small kitchen that without proper organization, this prime real estate can disappear in a flash. So, like any good broker, you must find the underutilized spaces and take advantage of them. The first place you should look is under the cabinets. Unless you have lights installed under your cabinets, this area of the kitchen is probably empty. Use it. It is an ideal place to store wine glasses and tea cups. For wine glasses, install metal tracks, like those used in bars, lengthwise along the bottom of the cabinet. Then store your glasses upside down along the tracks. For tea cups, use simple screw in hooks found at almost any hardware store. Getting just these two sets of items out of the cabinets frees up a tremendous amount of space for other things.

If you don't have cabinets over your sink, stove, or island, a great device is the overhead rack. They come in a variety of sizes, styles, and finishes, and offer a great place to hang pots, pans, and oversized serving utensils. They give the kitchen a little more of a professional look as well. Just be wary if you install one over your stove because you're not going to want to lean over the lit burners while you're searching for the right frying pan.

Are you one of those cooks who love spice, and has shaker upon shaker of pepper, tarragon, and sage? Do they fill up the entire bottom shelf of the cupboard? Why not invest in the Select-a-Spice Satin. It's like a tie rack for spices. It holds around 12 spices and spins freely, giving you access to any of them, and most importantly, it takes up a fraction of the room as all the freely bought spices you have floating around. Another option is magnetic tins. These containers by Soho Spices stick to anything metal, like fridges or those magnetic strips mounted against kitchen splashboards used to hold knives (which is also a great space-saving device).

To address the flour and sugar issue I'm dealing with, it's about time I visit a local antique shop and find some classic jars. If presented nicely, it is completely acceptable to leave these baking necessities on the counter for display, it's just a matter of deciding what nicely means. The first part is to find a matching set. Make sure the jars look good together. If you stumble upon jars that actually read "Flour" and "Sugar," that's perfect. Another option is old-fashioned candy jars; after all, they are designed to sit on the counter. They are also transparent, so you will know when it's time to fill up. If you're looking for something a bit flashier, then go for colored glass. The apparatuses don't have to actually be made for flour, they don't even have to be made to hold foods. Search on line for glass canisters and you'll find some interesting alternatives to the cumbersome bag of Domino Sugar. If you do not use these items too often, smaller jars work better, freeing up even more space on the counter. Store the remaining bag of the flour or sugar on a shelf in the basement that you have specifically designated for food.

Spring cleaning may not be as hectic as you once thought, so before you decide to cancel all the holidays at your house, spend the next couple of days canceling the clutter.

The Majesty of Garden Elephants

One of the more fascinating garden plants for the summer garden is the "elephant ear." This is a great plant to use to punctuate the garden landscape with a sense of the tropics. These large-leaved plants grow three to five feet tall and have big, leathery leaf stalks. They are a great addition to the landscape and make an ideal container plant for the summer patio. They are easy to grow when a few basic rules are followed.

Elephant ears are in the same family of plants as the Caladium – though they do not typically have colored leaves. Typically, elephant ears go by the name of Colocasia Esculentum, though the marketplace has a variety of large-leaved plants under other classifications that may be called elephant ears. Elephant ears originate from tropical and sub-tropical areas in the Americas, and are hardy only to about Zone 9. In the northeast, the plant can be cultivated in a fashion similar to canna lilies and dahlias, meaning they need to be over-wintered in a basement or cool, frost-free room.

Elephant ears add a tropical look and feel to the home landscape. Exquisite on their own, they are effective when interspersed among smaller, colorful plants to add a sense of texture, or at the back of the border to create a stunning boundary effect.

Elephant ears grow from what looks like a huge bulb. It is actually a tuber (elephant ear tubers may weigh as much as four or five pounds). Garden centers such as Marders have good-sized, quality tubers available at this time of year. When purchasing tubers, look for heavy tubers that are solid to the touch. Avoid any tubers that seem to have mold or soft spots, or that are dry and hard. The tubers should feel pulpy and solid to the touch.

Because of the large size of the leaves, many people believe elephant ears are best in shady locations. This is not true. While the plant will grow in shade, it really puts on the best display in full sun, and in a location that is hot and humid.

Late April and early May are the ideal times to start elephant ears, though they can get an earlier start when planted in large pots in late February (just when days begin to lengthen).

To plant elephant ears, wait until all danger of frost has passed. Select a sunny location that will receive hot sun, and that provides adequate space for the plant. Elephant ears prefer loamy garden soil that retains moisture, but provides good drainage (boggy or wet soils tend to rot the tubers).

Dig a hole about twelve inches deep and mix in plenty of compost, manure, or peat. Fill the hole about one-third or so full and place the bulb. Remember the leaves can be quite heavy, so situate the tuber about six inches below the surface of the soil to ensure adequate anchoring of the plant. Place the tuber with the root base facing downward. Back fill the hole with the enriched soil. Water the tuber very well to start. Leaves should start to emerge in three to four weeks. These same rules can be followed if planting the tuber in containers. We have found that three large tubers planted together in an 18-inch pot produce a stunning patio effect. Just make sure that any container selected is large enough to provide adequate and consistent moisture.

Elephant ears are heavy feeders, so every three weeks or so, add a handful of a nitrogen-rich fertilizer. This will maximize the size of the leaves produced. Keep the soil moist all season long. (The use of a heavy mulch around the base of the tuber helps to retain water.)

In the fall, tubers that have been grown in the garden can be dug up and stored. Cut off the leafy tops of the tubers, dust with a fungicide, and store in an open container that has enough peat moss to cover the bulbs. Ears that have been grown in containers can be moved indoors, or similarly dug and stored.

One precautionary note, elephant ear leaves and tubers are poisonous. Because the leaves are attractive, they sometimes entice children to cut them and to use them to play with, which can cause an allergic reaction.

Elephant ears are a great and easy addition to the garden landscape. If you are looking for something that provides a unique, tropical touch to the garden and is hassle-free, this is your solution!

Under One Umbrella

in your Hampton's outdoor space

elegance • versatility • craftsmanship • durability

Whether its shelter from the East End's summer sun, protection from a Long Island evening mist, or temporary privacy for a family gathering or huge social event, outdoor lateral and center pole umbrellas from Under One Umbrella can provide it all. In addition to providing daily shade, our umbrellas with their optional vinyl and fabric side panels can provide you with everything from a casual evening outdoor card room, a temporary pool side changing room, or an extra elegant party tent. And when your event is over, take down the panels and the umbrella is ready to do what a quality umbrella does best; provide you and your family with an escape from the sun's harmful UV rays. Only your imagination limits the use of these marvelous shade providers from Italy.

other possibilities. Cellar design can be customized to include carvings, pillars, cornices, artwork, tile work and storage for different size bottles. While many common wood varieties and exotics are available, the vast majority of wine cellars today are made of all heart redwood, which is the wood of choice due to its natural mold and mildew resistant qualities. (And before you ask, no, cedar is for your closet only to keep the moths away from your sweaters.)

So, how do you get started? Call for a complimentary consult to get a "one-stop shop" plan for a custom design, refrigeration system, racking configuration and installation. Line up a contractor for wine room preparation. Envision thanking the installer on his way out, passing by your friends who are on their way in with bottled gifts to fill your cellar for the Grand Opening celebration.

Finally, don't forget to toast the Phoenicians, the Greeks and Romans, monks, Charlemagne, the Brits, the Gold Rush, the railroad, the repeal of Prohibition (and any relevant significant other) for that savory moment and ultimately making it all possible. Enjoy.

Linda Brown of Custom Wine Cellars represents Wine Cellar Innovations as a dealer covering Long Island to provide high end turnkey custom wine cellars including design, proprietary refrigeration systems, custom racking and installation with a focus on excellent service. Solar (continued from page 34)

Solar electric systems are most efficient if they have a full day of southern exposure; east and west are the outward bounds for capturing the strength of the sun's rays. The second factor is roof space, which should not be a factor for many homes – particularly the larger estates. A full size system, 10 kilowatts or 10,000 watts, requires about 750 square feet; this is also the largest sized system for which LIPA offers its rebate.

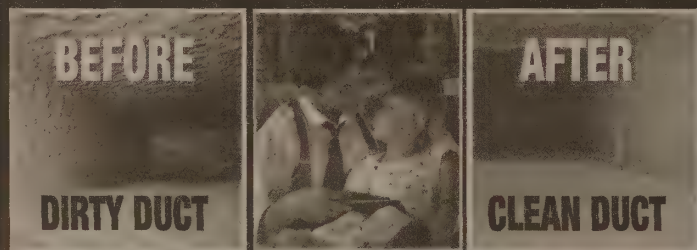

What can you expect? An optimal system can produce more than $2,500 worth of electric power annually at today's aggregate cost (i.e., the rate or tariff plus the controversial fuel surcharge). The economic upside is that as the cost for traditional power rises so does the cost-avoidance for those who have switched to Solar.

Look to the LIPA website and its Solar Pioneer Program for detailed information and a list of approved Solar Contractors. We are also lucky to have a first class advocate based in Bridgehampton, RELI or Renewable Energy Long Island. Their website is www.renewableenergylongisland.org or www.lishines.org

Mixing It Up with a Mortar and Pestle

I told a few friends that I would be writing an article about mortars and pestles, and I got a few interesting response:

Mortars and Pesto's? What?

Does that have something to do with fireworks?

The most lucid answer came from my little sister—the art history graduate student with a strong interest in “material culture”:

Ah, yes, the symbol for a pharmacy in Europe.

I would imagine that most people conjure up ideas of Native Americans – or at least I do – working with the two tools, making some sort of medicine, and that image is not far from their purpose; the most common uses of the tools fall into two categories: medicines and cooking.

The two tools are almost always used with one another for grinding and/or mixing substances. The mortar is the vessel that contains the substance being ground/mixed and usually has a round bottom and a wide top for increased surface area. The mortar almost always stands on its own, and, in a sense, is the workspace. The pestle is the doer—the stick used for the pounding, grinding, mixing, and stirring.

My sister was actually correct with her memory of the pharmacy icon. Though not as common today, in the 1600 and 1700s, mortar and pestles were traditionally used in pharmacies to crush various ingredients on site. A customer would come in looking for a particular medicine and the pharmacies would use the mortar and pestles to grind up the ingredients, often-times herbs or flowers, before adding other, frequently liquid ingredients to make an ointment or salve. The icon remains today, and across Western Europe one will often find the symbol adorning the doors or outside signage of community pharmacies.

For pharmaceutical use, porcelain is the most popular substance for the mortar and the head of the pestle, and the handle of the pestle is made of wood. Mortar and pestles sets used for cooking come in a variety of styles and shapes and are most often made from ceramic, metal, stone, or wood.

These tools are used all over the world and have been used throughout a wide range of historical periods. Two countries with a long history of using the tools are Japan and Mexico.

In Japan, suribachi is the term for a mortar and pestle. These objects are often made of earthenware and are glazed on the outside. The inside of the bowl usually has a ridged pattern to help in grinding. The pestle part of the tool is called a surikogi and is often wood. Sesame seeds are the most frequent ingredients being crushed in Japan, although a variety of pastes are also created with the tool.

Molcajete y tejolote is the Mexican version of the mortar and pestle and this is often made of volcanic rock. Salsa and guacamole are the two most common food products, but even ground chilies or other herbs and spices are made using the tools. Tomatoes are often crushed for later use with tomatillos.

The molcajete history is a long one—dating back 6,000 years ago. Grain was initially the most often found substance being ground up in molcajete. Today, more traditional Mexican cooks still use the tool.

In a contemporary American kitchen, the mortar and pestle is often used for creating pestos or mashing garlic, since crushing the fibers of herbs releases the full range of essential oils they contain. Fresh spices and herbs are more flavorful and add more zest to a dish when they are freshly ground.

Cleaning the often porous surfaces of mortars and pestles can be a strange and sometimes difficult task. Soapy water is rarely recommended because ceramic surfaces will absorb some of the suds and will result in soapy tasting and smelling ingredients the next time around.

Instead, a simple rinse left to drip dry is recommended. If sticky substances have left residues on either/both the mortar and pestle, a hard brush can be used to scrub the surfaces clean. Because of the potential for ceramic substances to absorb the smell and/or flavor of any of the ingredients that it is used with, it is not recommended that scented or strongly flavored oils be added to a mix being created. Instead, if a recipe calls for one of these ingredients, use a standard mixing bowl to stir in the oil.

Because of the long history of the tools in a variety of different cultures, some are collected as decorative additions to a family home and not actually used for either cooking or medicinal purposes.

Whatever your own use of the mortar and pestle—I doubt fireworks will be involved—unless, of course, you are planning to create a very strong salsa!

pianos not only displayed this vaunted piano manufacturer's aesthetic sensibilities, but showed its prowess as a technical innovator.

A great example of this combination of beauty and brains is the Tricentennial Steinway grand piano, which commemorates the 300th anniversary of the invention of the piano. The first Steinway limited-edition piano to be created jointly at factories in New York and Hamburg, Germany, the Tricentennial marked the first time since the early 20th century that a 6-foot-2-inch Model A grand piano was offered by Steinway in the Americas.

Designed by internationally acclaimed furniture designer Dakota Jackson, the Tricentennial has a lid that folds back on itself in a series of tapered sections, which fall at various angles, creating a fanned effect. Its angular music desk – mounted on a bearing to roll toward and away from the player smoothly – is designed to hold sheet music like a pair of open hands.

These artcase and limited edition pianos are a testament to the ingenuity of Steinway & Sons. Company founder Henry Engelhard Steinway was a United States resident for just three years when he and his sons – Henry Jr., Albert and Charles – took jobs at several piano factories in New York City to learn more about the American piano industry.

Soon after Steinway & Sons was established, the company began exhibiting pianos at world fairs and winning awards for superior workmanship. The company is credited with the development of the overstrung grand-piano design and the patent of the modern concert grand piano.

Construction began on the Steinway & Sons

New York City piano factory – at that time, the world's largest – in 1860. Six years later, the first Steinway Hall was built near-by, complete with a 2,000-seat main auditorium. It became New York City's artistic and cultural center and even housed the New York Philharmonic for more than 30 years.

Today, Steinway-designed pianos are sold by a limited number of exclusive authorized dealers around the world. Steinway pianos are considered by most music experts as the world's finest and are played by 97 percent of all concert pianists performing with major symphony orchestras in the U.S.

For information on Steinway & Sons or Steinway-designed artcase and limited-edition pianos, contact Dan Miceli, Steinway Hall 109 W 57th St, NY, 212-246-1100 or www.steinway.com.

Island puts as much emphasis on aesthetics as functionality. "In most households there are two decision makers when it comes to confirming a major purchase and often times their interest in golf is not equal," Graham says. "Thus we design undulating greens with bunkers that offer the serenity one would expect living beside a finely designed golf course. Our goal is to design a short game system that will improve one's game while improving the homeowner's existing landscape at the same time. Since we use the finest looking synthetic turf in the industry, it is often difficult to discern where the real grass ends and the maintenance free turf begins."

What separates The Putting Green Company of Long Island from its competitors is its ability to replicate a world class hole or a favorite green from one's country club. "It is not unusual for us to bring in 400 yards of fill to reshape the landscape when creating our golfscapes," says Graham.

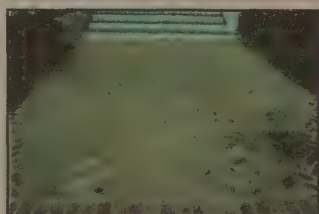

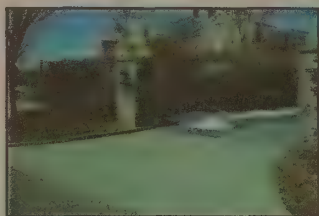

"Since we are serious about improving our client's short games, we will move small mountains to build a system that will be challenging for the avid golfer yet entertaining for the novice player."

To learn more about having your own custom putting green, call The Putting Green Company of Long Island at 1-800-390-4508 or visit their website at www.greensoflongisland.com. Or contact Jim Graham directly at 516-922-9484, jgraham@optonline.net.

-Nature Accents

The other day, while down on a beach in Westhampton on one of those surprisingly warm March days, I saw a family eagerly hunting for shells and rocks. They had a pretty big red bucket and were very interested in the shells that were fragmented. After a while I started finding some and adding them to their bucket. When I asked what they were for, one girl replied, "mosaics." The mother explained to me that the girls were very crafty and loved using beach materials in crafts. Essentially, with the help of their artist mother, the girls had learned to use objects they found in nature and create projects with them on canvas. The mother said that they often included little mirrors, beads and handmade paper in the projects.

That sounded like a lot of fun and I gathered sand, dried seaweed and shells took them home and saw what I could come up with as far as nature crafts. The best project that I created was a placemat using the found materials from the beach, as well as some dried flowers that I had lying around from an old arrangement. I used sheets of clear contact paper. I carefully arranged my materials. I found that breaking the shells into tinier, flatter pieces made the piece look better. After I was done, I sealed the top with another sheet of contact paper. Your children will love making these and they're perfect for an outdoor patio.

Another great nature project to create with them is greeting cards with dried flowers. Take some blank greeting cards and arrange the flowers on the front, add a little beach grass, shells, sand, and/or seaweed. You can opt to just glue the materials on or add a small piece of contact paper on the front to keep everything in place. Now, you've created an original work of art and some really fantastic looking stationery.

Pinecones are on the ground all over lately and are a great material to use for crafts because they are uniform and sturdy. Creating a spring wreath is a lot of fun. All you need is wiring, wire clippers, pinecones, glue, a bow and dried flowers. Arrange the wiring into a circle (choose your size) and use small pieces of wire to attach the cones. This may take some time, but it's worth it. Once complete, decorate with dried flowers, add the bow and attach a wire to hang it. You'll have a beautiful, natural wreath.

Spring and summer always mean gentle warm breezes, fresh air, sitting outside and listening to the sounds of nature on a porch swing. One of the nicest sounds heard in the gentlest of breezes is the chiming of delicate wind chimes. Seashells are another material with a lot of uses once the clam, mussel or snail who occupied it has departed. They are great for making wind chimes. Gather a variety of sizes and shapes and head to the craft store. Get fishing line, wood dowels, store-made wind chime accessories to use in between the shells and beads. You'll need a drill for this project to make tiny holes in the shells. String and arrange the shells, beads and accessories, and arrange the lines on the dowels (or twigs) and enjoy your new set of chimes.

If you are looking for a planter that is just a little different and beachy, head out to your local gardening store and pick up a few clear planters. Next head to your local beach and get some sand, shells, rocks, sea grass, seaweed and reeds. Line the planter with these materials. Mold it as if you were making a sand castle. Now add a plant which comes in a packing planter pot smaller than the one you bought and make sure that the smaller planter sits tightly in the larger planter and remains in its pot of soil. Cover the top of the soil with a little sand/soil mix. It's a great patio piece! You can also do this arrangement in a clear vase and add reeds, beach grass and fresh or dried flowers for a fun table arrangement.

This time of year lends itself to getting outside and exploring nature. There are so many great craft materials to be found just above your head or below your feet. When you're taking a moment to stop and smell the flowers, why not just pick one and get a little crafty at the same time!

FACT CHECKER

Dear Dan,

Jen told me that you had "escaped" to Africa. But I guess that you can never escape the paper. I am sending this to protest as strongly as possible the distorted and misinformed article about the Temple in your April 14 issue. Normally, I would not bother you about it but considering our past discussions I had to write this and set the record straight. How dare a journalist write such a one-sided prejudicial article (one Christian McLean) obviously fed by an attorney representing one side of a controversy without checking the facts with "the other side"?

1. "Gelfand has never been officially questioned by the board members." He HAS BEEN, the latest meeting was two weeks ago where Gelfand once again stonewalled the board's questions and allegations.

2. "The Center's board has been searching for a way to oust the Rabbi." The board never had a desire to oust the Rabbi. They attempted to have him answer the allegations, a process that has gone on for ten months without success. The board finally voted not to extend his contract. One does not need to be a nuclear scientist to understand the difference between not extending a contract to "firing" as the writer states with authority.

3. "The constitution of the Jewish Center is similar to that of the United States government. In theory the board is supposed to reflect the thoughts and best interests of the members of the Center but that doesn't seem to be the case." Religious corporate law is materially different than the American constitution. Even if it were so, the American Government would grind to a halt if it depended on constituent's referendums as the final word in deciding issues.

4. Your writer continually dwells on a "2/3 majority vote for the Rabbi at a 12/25 meeting." Firstly this vote was never corroborated with a list of voters. Secondly, the board DID not argue that the vote did not count. It responded to a suit against the board in the name of the Rabbi's committee by the same individual that fed the information to your reporter. He and your reporter neglect to mention that not only did the court call the meeting illegal and not binding, it dismissed the suit and the court also dismissed their appeal.

5. In the history of the Jewish Center, no congregational vote was ever taken concerning the hiring of an interim rabbi, including the initial first year hiring of Rabbi Gelfand AND never in the Jewish Center's history has the congregation ever voted or been involved in writing or approving a clerical contract.

6. Finally, the board is not "waiting around until June" for the Rabbi's contract to run out. The board voted 19 to 2 not to extend or renew the contract.

Regards.

ADD IT TO THE LIST

Dear Dan,

I read with interest your article "Jews Out East." Indeed, few people know the long history of the Jews on the East End, and I applaud the paper for covering the story. I was dismayed, however, to discover the omission of one of the newest and most exciting synagogues in the Hamptons, the Conservative Synagogue of the Hamptons.

The Conservative Synagogue of the Hamptons, founded in 1998, is unique on the East End in several respects. First, we are the only Conservative synagogue on the East End. Second, not only are we fully egalitarian in all respects, but we are the only synagogue in the history of the East End to have a woman Rabbi. Rabbi Jan R. Uhrbach, a graduate and faculty member of the Jewish Theological Seminary, has served our congregation since 1999.

Moreover, our congregation's history provides a welcome contrast to the controversies mentioned in your article. We enjoy a mutually supportive relationship with Temple Adas Israel, the Reform synagogue in Sag Harbor, and with the local churches in our town, most particularly the Old Whaler's (Presbyterian) Church and St. Andrew's (Catholic) Church. In fact, soon after our founding, we were invited by the Old Whaler's Church to worship in their newly constructed chapel. Their beautiful home has become our home as well, and the warmth, respect, and friendship between our two communities has grown and deepened through the years.

As we begin our 8th year, the Conservative Synagogue continues to grow both as a synagogue and as a community, a community that is on a spiritual, emotional and intellectual journey. We invite you to join us for a Shabbat service or dinner.

Wishing you a Happy Passover.

Stacy Menzer, President
The Conservative Synagogue of the Hamptons
East Hampton
Via e-mail

ANOTHER REMINDER

Dear Dan,

Thank you for your very interesting and illuminating article, Jews Out East. It was a wonderful read at Passover.

I must mention, however, that you omitted one Jewish place of worship out East - the Conservative Synagogue of the Hamptons in Sag Harbor. Our synagogue offers year-round services with spiritually and intellectually meaningful prayer in a supportive community environment. In the summer our services are led by Rabbi Jan Uhrbach.

All are welcome.

Police Blotter

Beach Burglars Caught

Four people were arrested in connection with the dozens of robberies that have taken place at various beaches between Southampton and East Hampton. The suspects were caught after police saw them breaking into a decoy vehicle at a Southampton beach. After getting arrested, the four suspects admitted to being jerks.

Saved From Flames

A man rescued a woman from her burning, overturned minivan after an accident. The heroic man went into the flaming mini-van and pulled the woman out, put a blanket over her shoulders and his arm around her. The man then said, "Happy to help and fight for truth, justice and the American way." He then stood on his feet, looked at the crowd of onlookers, smiled, and flew away.

Kicked A Car

A man was arrested in Sag Harbor after he kicked another person's car following a dispute. It may please the owner of the vehicle to know that the man really hurt his foot.

The Hang Up

A woman in East Hampton reported to police that somebody was repeatedly calling her home and then hanging up when she answered. Police dialed sixty-nine and arrested a couple of twelve-year-old boys who were making crank phone calls.

Motorcycle Dump Damage

Motorcross bicycles are the cause of damage to a landfill cap barrier which will cost the town $20,000 to repair, according to Patrick J. Keller of the East Hampton Town Department of Sanitation. Police are in search of some very, very, very dirty and smelly dirt bike owners.

License Plate Found

A lost license plate in East Hampton was found by police last week but was not returned to its original owner because the person who owns the license plate is not listed in the phonebook. Police are asking anyone who has the license plate with the letters, "BOOBY1" to give them a call.

Oil Burner Alert

Firefighters were scrambled when they got a call from a woman in East Hampton who reported that she smelled something burning inside of her home. When the firefighters arrived they determined that what the woman was smelling was simply the oil burner and not the building in flames. Feeling guilty, the woman baked all of the firemen some chocolate chip cookies for their troubles and their time.

Barking Dogs

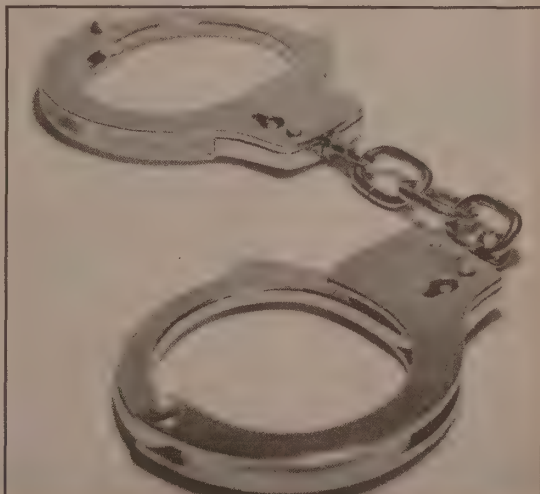

A couple was walking down their street in East Hampton when they were approached by two dogs that were barking at them. The couple called police who responded to the call and told the owner of the dogs to keep them on a leash. The dog owner responded by saying, "Woof!"

Thrown Rock

A double-pane window at a house in East Hampton was found broken after the family came back from vacation. It appeared that the window was broken by a rock that was thrown. Police believe that the rock may have been launched by a slingshot, and have ruled out being launched by a catapult.

IT'S TIME TO PAY OFF EQUITY LOANS AND LOWER MORTGAGE PAYMENTS BY 45%

Recent increases in the prime rate have homeowners scrambling to consolidate high rate home equity loans and lines of credit.

Many took out these loans when banks were pushing them as a replacement for conventional mortgages and enticing consumers with no closing cost teasers. Well, now it's time to anti up.

"Equity loans should not be used for long term financing" says John Sauro, President of North Atlantic Mortgage Corp. "It's likely the prime rate will increase another half percent before years end, pushing homeowner's payments even higher"

So what should you do?

Many have decided to refinance their first mortgage and the equity loan into one mortgage while rates are still low. "You can still get a great rate and there are programs available that can considerably lower monthly payments. A five minute consultation could result in significant savings."

For more information or to receive a Free Report on this and other financing strategies call
